Amusements, &c.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINE, CARS, AND RAIL-ROAD.

WM. NIBLO respectfully informs the public that he is now exhibiting, in full operation around the South Garden, the beautiful little Engine called the NOVELTY, made expressly for exhibition, together with Cars, which carries four or more persons with great rapidity over a Rail-Road of 140 yards, at the rate of eight miles the hour.

The Novelty was made by Mr. Baldwin, of Philadelphia, a distinguished Mechanician, who has formed after the model of the lightest and most beautiful of the English Engines. The Novelty for grace of action, ease, and smoothness of motion, will not be disparaged by comparison with any competitive instrument hitherto constructed.

This beautiful specimen of mechanicism would have been exhibit d to the New York public before this, had it not been for the Epicenic.

As the Novelty will be exhibited but for a short season those who wish to indulge a curiosity for witnessing this beautiful specimen of American Mechanism, and Locomotive Experiment, will no doubt find themselves highly gratified, and satisfied, that the time is not far distant, when one of those flying machines, in this age of improvement, may leave New York for the West, and in three days, place cannon on the battle ground, or merchandize in the warehouse of New Orleans, and return to New York in the same week. As the rise ordinarily executed, now on the Liverpool Rail-Road.

The hours of exhibition from 10 to 1 o'clock in the morning, from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, and from 7 to 10 in the evening.

Admittance 25 cents—children half price. s29

PEALE'S MUSEUM

AND GALLERY OF THE FINE ARTS,

Broadway, opposite the City Hall

THIS favorite fashionable resort has, during the temporary absence of the greater portion of the inhabitants, undergone numerous alterations and improvement, and no expense has been spared to render it still more attractive.—The proprietor hasn with pleasure the reappearance of his friends, and trusts that his humble endeavors to render this establishment a pleasing Evening Lounge, will on its re-opening on Monday evening next, the 3d September, be continued by the smiles of numerous citizens and strangers who that occasion the great Anaconda will be fed with a living rabbit.

To enumerate even a few of the principal curiosities in the Museum, would occupy too much space for an advertisement, and the reputation it has attained by the superiority of its specimens, at once does away the necessity of puffing. The public are invited to judge for themselves.

Admittance as usual, 25 cents—children half price. Season tickets on moderate terms. s29

THE COURT OF DEATH.

PAINTED by Rembrandt Peale is now open for exhibition and sale at the Rooms (late Athenæum) corner of Broadway and Pine st.

The idea of this subject was taken from Bishop Pretons' Poem on Death. The Picture is 24 feet long, 12 feet high—23 figures size of life. It is a popular Picture, which was exhibited in several cities with unprecedented success, has not been unrolled for many years. It was reserved with the idea of forming a Gallery, but that purpose being abandoned, and the author about to proceed to Europe, it will be disposed of by private or public sale, either to deposit in some Gallery or Hospital, or for profitable speculation as an exhibition picture. The following is a correct list of the receipts of this picture during the short period of its exhibition. In Baltimore, $1785; Philadelphia 810, (alarm of yellow fever) New York, 1767; Boston 1067, Salem 152 Charleston 1099; Savannah 300; Augusta 312; Richmond 277 Washington and Alexandria 670—in all $8239. This picture has lost none of its attraction, having been only enquired for; and a new generation has since grown up whose curiosity may be gratified in the contemplation of it.

THATCHED COTTAGE GARDEN,

JERSEY CITY.

SAMUEL S. LYNCH, late of Castle Garden, respectfully informs the citizens of New-York and vicinity, that he has taken the entire management of this unrivalled place of resort for rural pleasure and health, and that he is now ready to receive company, and affords every comfort and convenience that can be found in any similar establishment in the Union.

Two superior boats, and the requisite apparatus for the pleasant and agreeable sport of fishing, are at all times in readiness for the accommodation of friends and patrons. June—tf

OCEAN HOUSE.

At Stewardson Inlet, near Long Branch.

CAPT. JAMES PENNOYER respectfully informs the Public that the above House, under the superintendence of Mr. LAWRENCE STEDMAN, is now open for the Season.

This Establishment, being in the immediate vicinity of the Ocean, offers rare inducements to persons desirous of enjoying the luxuries of bathing during the Summer Months, of a Sea Breeze, and of Sea or River Bathing.

The new Steamboat Davis Bowen leaves New York from Fulton Market Wharf every day (except Thursday) for the above place, and lands passengers within Fifty Yards of the House. Persons leaving the city in the morning, can remain nearly six hours, and return by 6 o'clock, P. M.

Boats, Fishing Tackle, Bait, &c. can be obtained at any time.

THE SERAPHINE.

A NEW MUSICAL INSTRUMENT, INVENTED BY C. G. CHRISTMAN, 398 PEARL-ST.

AFTER a long time of unremitting perseverance, this extraordinary instrument is brought to the notice in its present very gratifying perfection. The Seraphine will be understood to be a keyed instrument, or an Organ in miniature, peculiarly adapted for general use, but it was not originally confined to domestic purposes, it is sufficiently powerful for small church or chapel, and yet it is compact so small an instrument, and so easily confined to domestic purposes. It

(From the New-World Star.)

A MOHAMMEDAN MIRACLE.

"Thy name, Ibrahim, is Fernando," said one of the Christians of our day, looking on his little cloth-covered dog-eared book, just from him.—"Fernando is well enough," said I, and my choice is all my inheritance."—"That art poor, no doubt," rejoined he, "but I design that thou shalt soon be richer, if thou will consent to obey my instructions that are to be given to you on a certain occasion," and the first time we dined to me how that the finances of the convent were miserably low—that a new organ for the chapel and many ornaments for the shrine altar were wanted, and that on the occasion of the approaching festival, which it was always the custom for the devout to lay some little offering upon the altar of the saint, it was intended to win devotion by some striking display of the saint's gratitude; and finally, I was made to understand that if I would consent to personate the saint, by wearing his ornaments and even—to hold a silver silver in my hand to receive the offerings, and to low my head whenever the donation exceeded a dime—I should be rewarded with a thousand reals; but on condition that I should immediately afterwards quit Valencia, and reside in some other town.

Upon the day appointed for the celebration of the festival, I was received by the superior, whom I found to be the same individual who had former-ly spoken with me, and who, with two or three others, was alone in the secret of the pious fraud in which I was to be an actor. "By this," said he, "we confirm the wavering, and strengthen the faith of the true Catholic—and thus the end justifies the means." The habiliments of the image having been removed, I easily slipped into its place, divesting myself only of my cloak, and found room enough within the foldings of the gilded robe that covered my tarnished dress; the crown was placed upon my head, a well contrived mask upon my face, and I mounted the silver in my hand, which, somehow or other, seemed to grow to my fingers. Thus prepared, the chapel rising was thrown open, and the matin bell began to chime. And now the devout Valencians poured in, and crowded into the chapel, where I stood beneath a silver gilded canopy. The wants of the convent had been industriously circulated by the friars, nor had less pains been taken to encourage a belief that some visible manifestation of the saint's good will and gratitude might be expected. The first that entered were some beggars with little more than their tattered brown cloaks to cover them, and a few quarter-drops upon the silver; large offerings succeeded—pesetas, half and whole dunas; but no sign of gratitude or good will escaped from the saint. At length a gold piece rung upon the silver, and forthwith the saint bow'd his head. The miracle was seen by all; a thousand thumbs had in an instant performed the sign of the cross—a thousand knees were bent, a loud and earnest hum of prayers rose from a thousand kindlers—at the same instant the organ pealed forth its loud anthem, and "Glory to God, glory in the highest," was the universal song of praise. But the miracle operated in a more substantial form; the profession (?) of an influential saint was well worth the sacrifice of a few dunas—gold poured into the silver; and to such an extent, that not only was the saint's neck weary of acknowledgement, and his arm of the weight with which devotion burthened it—but a new miracle became necessary—the silver salver was too small to contain all the gifts, and the gold was beginning to slide off the heap; the saint, therefore, withdrawing the salver, deposited the contents somewhere within the folds of his under garments, and again extended the vessel to the awe-struck votaries. The throng that had poured into the chapel at length began to lessen; and the mass having gone at the major altar, all hastened to place themselves before it, so that the chapel of the miraculous image was left for a time without a worshipper. Now, thought I as the moment—stepping my arms out of the wide sleeves of the saint, I disentangled myself from the cumbrous garments, which were stiff enough to stand erect without the help-mate of an image or its representative; the mask I left propped in its place, and the salver also I would have left in hand of the saint, but I was compelled to dispose of it otherwise—all following its contents within my girdle and having stealthily descended from the canopy, I threw my old cloak, which I had left behind it, over my shoulders, and drawing my hat over my brows, I walked leisurely out of the chapel, and through the church, and soon found myself in the Calle de Albaraya, and crossing the bridge of the Holy Trinity. What took place in the convent when mass was ended, at what time the discovery was made, or what steps were taken to trace the flight of the meek saint, I have no means of ascertaining, and never stopped to inquire; but satisfied that I had practised less fraud upon the friars than they had practised upon the people, I continued my walk at no unusual pace, that I might avoid suspicion, along the avenue that leads to the port—engaged like others in leisurely cutting up a melon, and eating it by the way.

THE BOSPHORUS.

A SKETCH.

The stranger whose felicity it has been to float between the shores of the Bosphorus, will often glance back with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction to the memory of those magical waters. This splendid strait, stretching from the harbor of Constantinople to the mouth of the Euxine, may be about twenty miles in length, and its ordinary breadth exceeds one mile. The old Greek story is, that one may hear the birds sing on the opposite shore. And this two great continents are divided by an ocean stream narrower than many rivers that are the boundaries of kingdoms. Yet it is strange that the character of these two famous divisions of our earth is nowhere more marked than on the shores of the Bosphorus. The traveller turns without disappointment from the gay and glittering shores of Europe to the sublimer beauty and the dusky grandeur of Asia.

The European side, until you advance within 1 or 2 miles of the Black Sea, is almost uninterruptedly studded with tasteful and ornamental buildings; beautiful villages and brilliant country palaces, and bright kiosks painted in arabesque and often gilt. The green back-ground to the scene is a sparkling stream of terraced gardens, rising up a chain of hills whose graceful undulations are crowned with groves of cypress and of chesnut, and occasionally breaking into fair and delicate valleys, richly wooded, and crossed by a grey and antique aqueduct.

But in Asia the hills rise into mountains, and the groves swell into forests. Every thing denotes a vast, rich and prolific land; but there is something classical, antique and eventful about it, in a general aspect, which the sense of stillness and deep repose pervades its less cultivated and less frequented shores; and this very eagles as they hover over the hills, speak of the Giants and of the dim past, and of the haunting sons of the past.

I remember that one of the most strange, and even sublime spectacles that I ever beheld occurred to me one balmy autumnal eve as I returned home in my caique from Therapia, a beautiful village on the Bosphorus, where I had been passing the day, to Pera. I encountered an army of Dolphins, who were making their way from the Ægean and the Sea of Marmora through the Strait to the Euxine. They stretched right across the water, and I should calculate that they covered, with every little interval, a space of three or four miles. It is very difficult to form an estimate of their number, but there must, of course, have been many thousands. They advanced in grand style and in regular formation, the snorting, snorting and splashing, and the well panting each I shall never forget. As it was late, no other caique was in sight, and my boatman, apparently afraid of coming too down, stopped to defend themselves with their oars. I had my pistols with me, and found great sport, as although the dolphins used every effort to avoid us, three were shot, and a dozen wounded. Whenever one was hit, the general confusion ran through the whole line; they all flounced about with increased energy, duck'd their round heads under water, and turne up their arrow tails. We remained thus stationary for nearly three quarters of an hour, and very diverting I found the delay. At length the mighty troop of strangers passed us, and, I suppose, must have arrived at the Symplegades at about the same time that I sought the elegant hospitality of the British Palace at Pera. [Mercantile Jour.]

From the London Court Journal

THE DUKE DE REICHSTADTS

FIRST INTERVIEW WITH HIS GRANDFATHER, THE EMPEROR FRANCIS II.

A traveller plainly dressed and unattended, but whose air and manner bespoke him a man of rank, was seated in the coffee-room of the Golden Sun, a tavern at Rambouillet, on the 15th of April, 1814, when a stripling of an interesting appearance entered, and drawing the host on one side spoke to him with great earnestness, bursting at the same time into tears.

Pity made the traveller forgetful of etiquette; he approached the young man, saying, in a kind tone,

"What is the matter, sir, why do you weep?"

"Let him alone," said the host, "th poor fellow is one of the Empress' pages, and he cries like a child because they will not permit him to take a last look at his mistress; they will not suffer one of the Imperial household to approach her."

The stranger made no reply, but he kept his eye fixed on the page. In a few minutes, the latter departed, and our traveller followed, with the intention of consoling him. In effect he had, he immediately afterwards quit Valencia, and resided in some other town.

Upon the day appointed for the celebration of the festival, I was received by the superior, whom I found to be the same individual who had formerly spoken with me, and who, with two or three others, was alone in the secret of the pious fraud in which I was to be an actor. "By this," said he, "we confirm the wavering, and strengthen the faith of the true Catholic—and thus the end justifies the means." The habiliments of the image having been removed, I easily slipped into its place, divesting myself only of my cloak, and found room enough within the foldings of the gilded robe that covered my tarnished dress; the crown was placed upon my head, a well contrived mask upon my face, and I mounted the silver in my hand, which, somehow or other, seemed to grow to my fingers. Thus prepared, the chapel rising was thrown open, and the matin bell began to chime. And now the devout Valencians poured in, and crowded into the chapel, where I stood beneath a silver gilded canopy. The wants of the convent had been industriously circulated by the friars, nor had less pains been taken to encourage a belief that some visible manifestation of the saint's good will and gratitude might be expected. The first that entered were some beggars with little more than their tattered brown cloaks to cover them, and a few quarter-drops upon the salver; large offerings succeeded—pesetas, half and whole dunas; but no sign of gratitude or good will escaped from the saint. At length a gold piece rung upon the silver, and forthwith the saint bow'd his head. The miracle was seen by all; a thousand thumbs had in an instant performed the sign of the cross—a thousand knees were bent, a loud and earnest hum of prayers rose from a thousand kindlers—at the same instant the organ pealed forth its loud anthem, and "Glory to God, glory in the highest," was the universal song of praise. But the miracle operated in a more substantial form; the profession (?) of an influential saint was well worth the sacrifice of a few dunas—gold poured into the salver; and to such an extent, that not only was the saint's neck weary of acknowledgement, and his arm of the weight with which devotion burthened it—but a new miracle became necessary—the silver salver was too small to contain all the gifts, and the gold was beginning to slide off the heap; the saint, therefore, withdrawing the salver, deposited the contents somewhere within the folds of his under garments, and again extended the vessel to the awe-struck votaries. The throng that had poured into the chapel at length began to lessen; and the mass having gone at the major altar, all hastened to place themselves before it, so that the chapel of the miraculous image was left for a time without a worshipper. Now, thought I as the moment—stepping my arms out of the wide sleeves of the saint, I disentangled myself from the cumbrous garments, which were stiff enough to stand erect without the help-mate of an image or its representative; the mask I left propped in its place, and the salver also I would have left in hand of the saint, but I was compelled to dispose of it otherwise—all following its contents within my girdle and having stealthily descended from the canopy, I threw my old cloak, which I had left behind it, over my shoulders, and drawing my hat over my brows, I walked leisurely out of the chapel, and through the church, and soon found myself in the Calle de Albaraya, and crossing the bridge of the Holy Trinity. What took place in the convent when mass was ended, at what time the discovery was made, or what steps were taken to trace the flight of the meek saint, I have no means of ascertaining, and never stopped to inquire; but satisfied that I had practised less fraud upon the friars than they had practised upon the people, I continued my walk at no unusual pace, that I might avoid suspicion, along the avenue that leads to the port—engaged like others in leisurely cutting up a melon, and eating it by the way.

THE BOSPHORUS.

A SKETCH.

The stranger whose felicity it has been to float between the shores of the Bosphorus, will often glance back with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction to the memory of those magical waters. This splendid strait, stretching from the harbor of Constantinople to the mouth of the Euxine, may be about twenty miles in length, and its ordinary breadth exceeds one mile. The old Greek story is, that one may hear the birds sing on the opposite shore. And this two great continents are divided by an ocean stream narrower than many rivers that are the boundaries of kingdoms. Yet it is strange that the character of these two famous divisions of our earth is nowhere more marked than on the shores of the Bosphorus. The traveller turns without disappointment from the gay and glittering shores of Europe to the sublimer beauty and the dusky grandeur of Asia.

The European side, until you advance within 1 or 2 miles of the Black Sea, is almost uninterruptedly studded with tasteful and ornamental buildings; beautiful villages and brilliant country palaces, and bright kiosks painted in arabesque and often gilt. The green back-ground to the scene is a sparkling stream of terraced gardens, rising up a chain of hills whose graceful undulations are crowned with groves of cypress and of chesnut, and occasionally breaking into fair and delicate valleys, richly wooded, and crossed by a grey and antique aqueduct.

But in Asia the hills rise into mountains, and the groves swell into forests. Every thing denotes a vast, rich and prolific land; but there is something classical, antique and eventful about it, in a general aspect, which the sense of stillness and deep repose pervades its less cultivated and less frequented shores; and this very eagles as they hover over the hills, speak of the Giants and of the dim past, and of the haunting sons of the past.

I remember that one of the most strange, and even sublime spectacles that I ever beheld occurred to me one balmy autumnal eve as I returned home in my caique from Therapia, a beautiful village on the Bosphorus, where I had been passing the day, to Pera. I encountered an army of Dolphins who were making their way from the Ægean and the Sea of Marmora through the Strait to the Euxine. They stretched right across the water, and I should calculate that they covered, with every little interval, a space of three or four miles. It is very difficult to form an estimate of their number, but there must, of course, have been many thousands. They advanced in grand style and in regular formation, the snorting, snorting and splashing, and the well panting each I shall never forget. As it was late, no other caique was in sight, and my boatman, apparently afraid of coming too down, stopped to defend themselves with their oars. I had my pistols with me, and found great sport, as although the dolphins used every effort to avoid us, three were shot, and a dozen wounded. Whenever one was hit, the general confusion ran through the whole line; they all flounced about with increased energy, duck'd their round heads under water, and turne up their arrow tails. We remained thus stationary for nearly three quarters of an hour, and very diverting I found the delay. At length the mighty troop of strangers passed us, and, I suppose, must have arrived at the Symplegades at about the same time that I sought the elegant hospitality of the British Palace at Pera. [Mercantile Jour.]

From the London Court Journal

THE DUKE DE REICHSTADTS

FIRST INTERVIEW WITH HIS GRANDFATHER, THE EMPEROR FRANCIS II.

A traveller plainly dressed and unattended, but whose air and manner bespoke him a man of rank, was seated in the coffee-room of the Golden Sun, a tavern at Ramboullet, on the 15th of April, 1814, when a stripling of an interesting appearance entered, and drawing the host on one side spoke to him with great earnestness, bursting at the same time into tears.

Pity made the traveller forgetful of etiquette; he approached the young man, saying, in a kind tone,

"What is the matter, sir, why do you weep?"

"Let him alone," said the host, "th poor fellow is one of the Empress' pages, and he cries like a child because they will not permit him to take a last look at his mistress; they will not suffer one of the Imperial household to approach her."

The stranger made no reply, but he kept his eye fixed on the page. In a few minutes, the latter departed, and our traveller followed, with the intention of consoling him. In effect he had, he immediately afterwards quit Valencia, and resided in some other town.

Upon the day appointed for the celebration of the festival, I was received by the superior, whom I found to be the same individual who had formerly spoken with me, and who, with two or three others, was alone in the secret of the pious fraud in which I was to be an actor. "By this," said he, "we confirm the wavering, and strengthen the faith of the true Catholic—and thus the end justifies the means." The habiliments of the image having been removed, I easily slipped into its place, divesting myself only of my cloak, and found room enough within the foldings of the gilded robe that covered my tarnished dress; the crown was placed upon my head, a well contrived mask upon my face, and I mounted the silver in my hand, which, somehow or other, seemed to grow to my fingers. Thus prepared, the chapel rising was thrown open, and the matin bell began to chime. And now the devout Valencians poured in, and crowded into the chapel, where I stood beneath a silver gilded canopy. The wants of the convent had been industriously circulated by the friars, nor had less pains been taken to encourage a belief that some visible manifestation of the saint's good will and gratitude might be expected. The first that entered were some beggars with little more than their tattered brown cloaks to cover them, and a few quarter-drops upon the salver; large offerings succeeded—pesetas, half and whole dunas; but no sign of gratitude or good will escaped from the saint. At length a gold piece rung upon the salver, and forthwith the saint bow'd his head. The miracle was seen by all; a thousand thumbs had in an instant performed the sign of the cross—a thousand knees were bent, a loud and earnest hum of prayers rose from a thousand kindlers—at the same instant the organ pealed forth its loud anthem, and "Glory to God, glory in the highest," was the universal song of praise. But the miracle operated in a more substantial form; the profession (?) of an influential saint was well worth the sacrifice of a few dunas—gold poured into the salver; and to such an extent, that not only was the saint's neck weary of acknowledgement, and his arm of the weight with which devotion burthened it—but a new miracle became necessary—the silver salver was too small to contain all the gifts, and the gold was beginning to slide off the heap; the saint, therefore, withdrawing the salver, deposited the contents somewhere within the folds of his under garments, and again extended the vessel to the awe-struck votaries. The throng that had poured into the chapel at length began to lessen; and the mass having gone at the major altar, all hastened to place themselves before it, so that the chapel of the miraculous image was left for a time without a worshipper. Now, thought I as the moment—stepping my arms out of the wide sleeves of the saint, I disentangled myself from the cumbrous garments, which were stiff enough to stand erect without the help-mate of an image or its representative; the mask I left propped in its place, and the salver also I would have left in hand of the saint, but I was compelled to dispose of it otherwise—all following its contents within my girdle and having stealthily descended from the canopy, I threw my old cloak, which I had left behind it, over my shoulders, and drawing my hat over my brows, I walked leisurely out of the chapel, and through the church, and soon found myself in the Calle de Albaraya, and crossing the bridge of the Holy Trinity. What took place in the convent when mass was ended, at what time the discovery was made, or what steps were taken to trace the flight of the meek saint, I have no means of ascertaining, and never stopped to inquire; but satisfied that I had practised less fraud upon the friars than they had practised upon the people, I continued my walk at no unusual pace, that I might avoid suspicion, along the avenue that leads to the port—engaged like others in leisurely cutting up a melon, and eating it by the way.

THE BOSPHORUS.

A SKETCH.

The stranger whose felicity it has been to float between the shores of the Bosphorus, will often glance back with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction to the memory of those magical waters. This splendid strait, stretching from the harbor of Constantinople to the mouth of the Euxine, may be about twenty miles in length, and its ordinary breadth exceeds one mile. The old Greek story is, that one may hear the birds sing on the opposite shore. And this two great continents are divided by an ocean stream narrower than many rivers that are the boundaries of kingdoms. Yet it is strange that the character of these two famous divisions of our earth is nowhere more marked than on the shores of the Bosphorus. The traveller turns without disappointment from the gay and glittering shores of Europe to the sublimer beauty and the dusky grandeur of Asia.

The European side, until you advance within 1 or 2 miles of the Black Sea, is almost uninterruptedly studded with tasteful and ornamental buildings; beautiful villages and brilliant country palaces, and bright kiosks painted in arabesque and often gilt. The green back-ground to the scene is a sparkling stream of terraced gardens, rising up a chain of hills whose graceful undulations are crowned with groves of cypress and of chesnut, and occasionally breaking into fair and delicate valleys, richly wooded, and crossed by a grey and antique aqueduct.

But in Asia the hills rise into mountains, and the groves swell into forests. Every thing denotes a vast, rich and prolific land; but there is something classical, antique and eventful about it, in a general aspect, which the sense of stillness and deep repose pervades its less cultivated and less frequented shores; and this very eagles as they hover over the hills, speak of the Giants and of the dim past, and of the haunting sons of the past.

I remember that one of the most strange, and even sublime spectacles that I ever beheld occurred to me one balmy autumnal eve as I returned home in my caique from Therapia, a beautiful village on the Bosphorus, where I had been passing the day, to Pera. I encountered an army of Dolphins who were making their way from the Ægean and the Sea of Marmora through the Strait to the Euxine. They stretched right across the water, and I should calculate that they covered, with every little interval, a space of three or four miles. It is very difficult to form an estimate of their number, but there must, of course, have been many thousands. They advanced in grand style and in regular formation, the snorting, snorting and splashing, and the well panting each I shall never forget. As it was late, no other caique was in sight, and my boatman, apparently afraid of coming too down, stopped to defend themselves with their oars. I had my pistols with me, and found great sport, as although the dolphins used every effort to avoid us, three were shot, and a dozen wounded. Whenever one was hit, the general confusion ran through the whole line; they all flounced about with increased energy, duck'd their round heads under water, and turne up their arrow tails. We remained thus stationary for nearly three quarters of an hour, and very diverting I found the delay. At length the mighty troop of strangers passed us, and, I suppose, must have arrived at the Symplegades at about the same time that I sought the elegant hospitality of the British Palace at Pera. [Mercantile Jour.]

City of New-York:

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 10, 1832.

☞ The undersigned have sold to Mr JAMES D. ARMSTRONG, all right and title to the "SPIRIT OF THE TIMES AND LIFE IN NEW-YORK," with all their dues for the same, and they avail themselves of this opportunity to express their gratitude to those friends whose patronage they have enjoyed, and whose future favors they hope will be extended to the present proprietor with equal liberality.

WILLIAM T. PORTER,
THOMAS W. RENNE,
Former Proprietors of the "Spirit of the Times and Life in New-York."

New-York, Nov. 3, 1832.

☞ The undersigned has purchased from WM. T. PORTER & Co. the copy right of the "SPIRIT OF THE TIMES AND LIFE IN NEW-YORK," and all dues for the same. To sustain that character which this Paper has heretofore enjoyed among its Patrons, the present publisher has secured for the editorial department, the labors of one who has largely contributed to its columns since its first publication. No effort or expense will be withheld that can render it worthy the patronage that has thus far sustained it, the continuance of which is most respectfully solicited.

JAMES D. ARMSTRONG.

New-York, Nov. 3, 1832.

☞ Our authorised Agent, H. G. Dickens, will proceed up the Hudson the ensuing week to make collections for this paper. He is our only agent, and we request our patrons, both in the city and country, not to pay their subscriptions to any other person.

New-York, November 10, 1832.

LIFE IN NEW-YORK.

Except to politicians, the past has been an unpleasant week. For three days we were enabled to form pretty just conceptions of "The Three Days in Paris." There was no burning of powder to be sure, but there were many glorious opportunities for the acquisition of a black eye, or a "disturbed condition" of the "handle of one's face." Every street was thronged with crowds wending their way to the polls, where the scene of confusion and bustle was enough to damp the ardor of any quiet politician, and almost cause him to forego the privilege of voting. But the occasion was deemed peculiarly important, and some five thousand more voters were cast than had been ever before polled in our city.

"The agony is over" as the wise ones say, and we turn with pleasure from the excitement and turmoil just past to a closely contested city election, to those subjects which though less intense, are of more varied and pleasurable interest. We, more perhaps, than most editors have felt the death of interesting topics, since the political strife has been raging, wherewith to fill our sheet, and render it at the same time of that light and sportive character which becomes the chronicler of the gladdening amusements of the day. But this season has now terminated, and we shall be cheered on our future course by the enlivening efforts of our cotemporaries, who will now fill their columns with more interesting details than the trite and stale barkbitings of greedy politicians.

A farmer in the vicinity of Jackson, Miss recently, on a hunting excursion, shot a rattlesnake, which he leftying in the road; on his return to the place about two hours afterwards, the snake was missing while making search for it he discovered a rattlesnake, which he also shot when on approaching it, he found the object of his search, the last one killed having swallowed the former.

FINE PRINTING.—We gratefully acknowledge the receipt of a splendid leaf of plumb-cake, presented to us by an esteemed friend in Stamford. It is neatly iced over with sugar, of a milk white, and beautifully embossed with variegated figures made of sugar, of a variety of colors, with the patriotic words of Patrick Henry placed on the top, "give me liberty or give me death!"—Gospel Witness.

Now the veritable editor of the Gospel Witness has forgotten to tell us the why and wherefore he should have been made the recipient of a splendid plumb-cake; though his having published the fact, shows either that it was connected with some public occasion—or that he is a prodigious favorite with the Stamford ladies—or that he wishes to excite the envy of his poor brother editors, by hinting that cake "embossed with variegated figures made of sugar" is not an every day dish with the "trade." Well, this is all natural enough, for most men are disposed to ejaculate "what a tail our cat's got," though in the present instance, we must reverse the figure and exclaim, what a head the Gospel Witness got. Do you take, Sir Teacher?

THE RIOT.

During the Election, there were many scenes enacted of the tragico comico order, that gave wondrous mirth to the admirers of bloody heads and bull-dog ferocity. But the game of "knock down and drag out" was perhaps better illustrated (tho' we would not be invidious) in the Seventh and Fourteenth Wards, than in all the others put together. A company of bully-ing rioters attempted to take possession of the ballot boxes at the Seventh Ward poll, and actually prevented the depositing of many votes. At the Fourteenth, a portion of the same gang amused themselves during the day by the enactment of similar feats, and at night commenced using up the waters of the Croton in a manner he could not behold without tears. He immediately applied to our determined High Constable Hays, who, with the assistance of a hardy band of the sturdy watchmen of the night, made an onset on the turbulent political rioters, who received the "Charlies" with a warm salute of clubs and sticks, but were ultimately subdued—some made prisoners, others escaping, and others, trampled into the dirt, were overlooked in the march for the watch-house.

A number of respectable individuals were more or less injured by the mob, but as bleeding for our country is glory to the individual, we presume no one regrets the loss of a little claret, a tooth or two, or an eye, if by its means he contributes to the "freedom of elections."

A number of the choice spirits, we understand, are bound over for trial, and we trust they will meet with that reward which their merits so strikingly demand.

A DECLARATION EASILY.—The New-Hampshire Telegraph, speaking of Phrenology, says:—"We once had our cranium examined by a lady who made no inconsiderable pretensions to the science. We recollect that our head was pretty well "bumped" to say the least, but what was indicated thereby, our memory saith not—guess not much! She, however, made us out a very clever fellow!—but we always suspected her of some design—he was the young side of twenty-five—unmarried!!"

What unconscionable vanity some of us editors betray. Just think of a pumkin-headed knight of the quill submitting himself to the manipulations of a fair lady, and after she has thrust her pretty fingers through his wiry locks to discover a single indication of talent, he has the presumption to hint that she found his head perfect, and is so unscrupulous as to attribute her "flattering tale" to some a fish vision on himself, and what is still worse, and never to be forgiven, he comes out with the lady sage. We expect to learn by the next Telegraph, that this same Mr Editor has had his hair combed with a three-legged stool, or has been made to appear before a committee of old maids and bagged pardon,—or has been entirely cut up, root and branch, at some desperate tea fight.

CHARLESTON STEAM PACKET.—We are pleased to refer our city readers to the notice in our advertising columns of the steamboat David Brown, which is to run between this and Charleston, S. C. The time employed in making this voyage by steam is not expected to exceed 70 hours. The David Brown is a new and elegant boat, well-fitted for sea, with a fine low pressure engine, burning anthracite coal—indeed she has every thing to recommend her to the patronage of those who are desirous of making this voyage with comfort and speed. Her commander, Capt Pennoyer, is well-known in this city, as a gentleman possessing all the requisite s of a seaman and the urbanity and kindness so desirable in a Master.

THE ITALIAN OPERA.

The Opera House continues to be most fashionably attended, and the "Troupe" to win new honors. On Monday the new opera of "L'Italiana in Algieri," was performed with marked applause, but not with the same enthusiasm that attended the representation of the two first favorite pieces. They have been repeated again and again, and on each occasion have elicited the admiration of the amateurs, and satisfied the most fastidious. It gives us pleasure to record the unequalled success that has attended the efforts of these enterprising and talented foreigners, and to them may be attributed, we trust, the permanent establishment in our city of the Italian Opera.

It is with no ordinary feelings of sorrow that we record the death of SIR WALTER SCOTT. The grave has now closed upon the remains of this highly gifted individual. He died in the month of September, at Abbotsford, of a most painful and lingering disease.

The new poem, by JOHN Q. ADAMS, late President of the U. S. which is advertised as in press at Boston, is anxiously looked for by the literary circles.

MAIL ROBBERY.

COACHING OFFICE,
NORTHAMPTON, Nov 1, 1832.

The great Western mail was stolen from behind the mail coach this morning, between this town and Chesterfield, and notwithstanding the vigilant exertions of our Postmaster, and the citizens on the road, no trace of it has been discovered. Three fellows were seen lurking about the stagehouse just before the stage left, and they unquestionably are the perpetrators of the robbery. The mail probably was taken into the adjoining woods and rifled of its contents (the value of which cannot yet be known) long before this time. Every exertion is making to recover the mail, and apprehend the robbers, and the melody of our voice the eloquence of our attorneys—all are brought of, and the soul fo thows spell-bound through our parts forgetful of the rest, and almost unconscious of its own emotion. This is her great merit. Every part she plays is effective. Even Julia, in the Hunchback, melts the whole audience into tears. If tragic, it is warm and affecting, if it is comic, it is redolent its chief qualities are reconciled, and its defects filled up, by her genius. She considers what the character should be, and she makes it so. In no part does she allow it to be lost in her own personality—depicting you in war pass one—she takes the whole heart, strikes every chord, and illuminates every feeling. Whatever she is called upon to personate she realizes, until we forget that it is but mere mimicry, and that she has and suspect that to be her peculiar power. The next transition undeserves. We follow her through every path of the drama, and acknowledge her unrivalled—the mistress of every avenue of the heart."

FOREIGN NEWS.

BELGIUM & HOLLAND.—The King of Holland has refused to accept the last conditions of the London Conference, in relation to the settlement of the affairs between his kingdom and that of Belgium. It is supposed the King relies on the assistance of Austria and Prussia, and somewhat on Russia. On the other hand the French and British Cabinets have the strongest inducements to support the throne of Leopold. Any offensive movement on either side would probably involve Europe in a general war. The Dutch army is described as being most formidable both in numbers and discipline.

SPAIN.—The death of the King of Spain, which now seems placed beyond a doubt, is an event pregnant with interesting consequences. He leaves but one child, a daughter, still an infant. By an ancient law of the Kingdom, no female can inherit the throne; this law he abrogated. Will his brother Don Carlos, to whom the crown would otherwise of right descend, quietly submit to be thus deprived of it? Our next accounts will probably throw some light on this subject.

PORTUGAL.—Gibraltar papers contain intelligence that there several attacks had been made upon Oporto by the troops of Don Miguel, who were each time repulsed with heavy losses. An engagement had taken place between the fleets, in which a frigate, a sloop of war, and a royal steamer belonging to Don Miguel's squadron were sunk.

THE DRAMA.

THE PARK.

After an absence of some weeks Mr and Miss KEMBLE have returned to our city, and have again appeared at this Theatre. The impression which they created during their first engagement was of that character to insure them the warmest welcome on their return. At an early hour the house was crowded with a most fashionable audience and the [illegible] of expectation to express their delight at again beholding these distinguished illustrators of the Drama.

Milman's tragedy of Fazio was selected for the occasion,—Mr KEMBLE playing Fazio for the first time. It was in this powerfully written play that Miss KEMBLE made her debut before an American audience and will do we reflect the impression she produced. On the first appearance Miss Kemble was more nearly approached in we then imagined that Fazio was at an ordinate character, from which her subsequent Bianca stood out in bold relief. In the hands of Mr Kemble Fazio appears entirely a different being—another Eugene Aram. A man of weakness, but yet redeemed in part by our sympathy in Bianca's love for him. Whatever she so ardently loved could not be altogether worthless, and thus in the development of the plot, Fazio evinces characteristics of excellence that vails in some degree his crimes, and renders Bianca's attachment for her husband not altogether unaccountable and unnatural. The part is not entirely suited to Mr Kemble but his mode of acting is so well calculated to enhance the interest and give scope and point to the striking passages in the play, that we doubt if any one could personate the character with any thing like the same effect.

But we have run before our story. The overture to Otello was played, and the curtain arose discovering both Father and Daughter seated in the study of an alchymist as husband and wife. The slightest glimpse of those well known features called forth a burst of rapturous greeting, that made "Old Drury" ring with welcomes that the compliment was felt and replied to most profoundly by both. The house then gradually hushed into silence as the silvery tones of that far enchanter rose like softest music, and soul all hearts seem by its very tenderness. Those who have not heard Miss Kemble, can have no conception of the influence her voice and its melodious cadences exercise over the feelings of the audience. To be [illegible] is [illegible] characteristic with a little consciousness, but then it finds its way to the heart, so effectively, that there is no resisting its witching power. A hard man would be enraptured, for it is not her sweet, nor the blandishments of a doating wife, nor her graceful attitudes, nor her inimitable gestures that so triumphantly transports all hearts. It is her voice more than all these put together. From the first to the last scene the effect was the same.

We have never seen a more sublime exhibition of passion than Miss Kemble's Bianca and we can never expect to. Tis heedless to enumerate the points in this thrilling tragedy or to single out passages of superlative merit. Every scene tells and strikes home with a power that is irresistible.

From some cause the audience at this theatre have become chary of their applause. Surely it is not that they are not pleased. It is easier to suppose they are so lost in the bewilderment of their senses that they forget this expression of their gratitude and admiration. The opposite fault has been so freely condemned, and the ridiculous bursts of applause are so instantly hushed into silence, that two-thirds of the house have ceased to applaud at any time. That is, they do not clap their hands nor throw up their caps. But for our single selves, we think there is a species of approbation that is quite as flattering, and a hundred times more sincere, which can be witnessed whenever Miss Kemble is portraying a scene of passion, and which to her must be quite intelligible—it is a dead silence. However we will not attempt to check any expression of admiration, which is so popular, and which is supposed to be so requisite to elicit the utmost exertions of an actor.

THE AMERICAN.

Mr HAMBLIN has introduced at this Theatre "an entirely new nautical drama," called Cascoe Bay, which has given general satisfaction. This play is full of spirit-stirring scenes, both in the tragic and comic line, but is by no means so popular as the "Cradle of Liberty." Many of the fighting scenes were pretty fair illustrations of what was going on out doors, and were attended by nearly the same consequences,—the hurras of the multitude, and the discomfiture of the partizans.

The drama of the White Eagle is a most favorite at this house, and Miss Waring, as Hazzi Luza she is the warmest applause. She is fast gaining favor with the public, and will eventually become what her friends have anticipated, a powerful and clever actress.

We were glad to see MISS VINCENT announced to make her next appearance in the Drama of Catherine of Cleves. On Thursday she appeared and it was a most clever and effective performance. Whatever this talented "fairy of the Bowery" attempts in earnest, can hardly fail of being worthy of the high reputation she has already attained and as Catherine of Cleves she more than fulfils our highest expectations. It will be repeated, and must add another to Miss Vincent's list of favorite characters. We invite our friends to witness it, and we are persuaded they will thank us for reminding them of such a treat.

Mr. Hamblin must not remit his exertions while he has to contend with the powerful attractions at the Richmond Hill and at the Park. His disappointment occasioned by Mr. Booth's illness should be remedied by engaging others of the various stars that are now within his reach. Our country never possessed as much theatrical talent as at this moment, and nothing short of the utmost liberality in our Managers will be satisfactory to our generously patronising community.

A writer in the London Literary Gazette furnishes an occasional article, entitled "A New Dictionary of the English Language." Some of the definitions prove the author to be the prince of lexicographers. Thus in Lion like pugnacious; Sheep the following which is not to be resisted:

Dove—The reward of the eminent and the notorious.

Criticism—Private malevolence under the cloak of public watchfulness.

Friendship—The resource of a baffled controversist.

Guest—The terror of all similes.

Pride—The incentive of strong minds,—the destruction of weak.

Tyranny—A lust wherewith the rabble are caught.

Presumption—The canker of the soul.

Reading—The cheapest and most lasting of all pleasures.

Two accountants arrived at New Orleans from Tampico with $100,000 in specie.

The Mechanics Bank in Alexandria, D. C. has suspended payment.

The Parliament of Upper Canada commenced its session on the 31st of Oct.

There are in the museum of London with a vast number of other animal men; there are 1923 printers, drafters, and engravers, 134 sculptors, 310 engrossers 180 or 190 civil engineers, 1000 accountants and of men of music, 1300 instrumental, 1300 [illegible] of military rank; total 5614

A gentleman suggested in England for the prize [illegible] 14 oz. from each other, [illegible] the grounds, the occupants of each of which [illegible] their time at [illegible] by keeping a mule of mule in Spain.

There are fourteen hundred and ninety-two Post Masters in the state of New York, whose aggregate results are 332,000 dollars per annum.

The steamboat Monticello, Capt. Patterson, on her way down to New-Orleans, on the 4th ult. collided on fire. One by two lives were lost.

The Cancer Venus Sceptrenas.—We are happy to announce that the Committee appointed by our office has lost $ 18 cents for the relief of the Cholera Sufferers, have appeared to the committee sufficient to enable to the purchase of 500 tickets of Dr Carey's Vegetable Pills of which to the Cholera Cure was offered by Messers Spofford, Tileston & Co free of expense, and that it has been distributed accordingly. In a number of the churches it was found more convenient to postpone the collection until next Sabbath.—Jour. of Com.

A man named Hoe, being on the spot for murder by Lord Rosen, made a request that his mere [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] was not unlikely he might be a dead statesman, from the similarity of their names. "No, no," said his lordship, "that can never be, at any rate Hog is good Hoe, and it is to be hoped, as a man must be hung before you can be called a statesman, he shall be hung with me."

Our [illegible] A most diabolical attempt was made to assassinate Capt Laines, post warden at the Room Penitentiary, on Wednesday evening. As this gentleman was walking down the canal, a shot did come from the bank, two pistols were and only this barged at his breast but happily without effect by a [illegible] [illegible] behind some bridge. In the confusion Capt Laines, while receiving the wound from his cane, fell into one of the [illegible] that have been made by the travelling of the horses on the margin of the canal. While on this situation the assassin that had attempted to shoot him began to beat Capt. L. upon the head with the butt of a pistol and a brick—but being seized by the leg the ruffian was thrown into the canal, where he was picked up by a boat and rowed to the lower side of the canal. A horse was there in readiness, and upon him the assassin made his escape. The circumstances combined—the attack—the boat—the horse—all bespeak a premeditated assassination which was only frustrated by the superior strength of the intended victim. But besides these, a placard was posted up in the neighborhood, a day or two previous, stating Frenchmen and dogs to attend the funeral of Capt. Laines to-morrow morning. Suspicion we learn already points to a Captain Lee as the perpetrator of the foul deed. Captain Laines is very seriously wounded in the head.

New Orleans Bee.

The following item is from a lawyer's bill, supplied by a firm in Red Lion square, London. "for calling on Mr.—, but, unfortunately, did not find him at home to-day." The same unfortunate circumstance also occurs five times in as many days.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.—One of

SPORTING VARIETIES.

FAIRFIELD RACES.

FIRST DAY.

TUESDAY, Oct. 30—A Colt Sweepstake, two mile heats, $200 entrance, half forfeit. Ten subscribers—five paid forfeit. The following is the result:

W. M. West's b. c. Sir Walter, ...1 1
J. M. Botts br. c. Douglas, ...4 2
D. H. Bratch's b. c. Tobacconist, ...5 3
J. J. Harrison's ch. c. by Sir Archie, ...2 4
J. Minge's bl. c. Black Hawk, ...3 5

Time 1st heat, 3m. 55s.—2m. 59s.

Tobacconist: this favorite against the field. Won easily by Sir Walter. The second heat hard in hand.

SECOND DAY.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 31—Proprietors' Purse, $300, two mile heats.

L. Puckett's g. f. Mary Randolph, 3 years old, ...1 1
W. H. Minge's b. h. May-Day, by Sir Archie, 5 years old, ...4 2
T. Lomax's g. h. Traffic, by Sir Charles, 5 years old, ...2 3
R. Adams' ch. f. Pet, by Gohanna, 3 years old, ...3 dis.
J. J. Harrison's b. h. Tom o'Shanter, 3 years old .....5 dis.

Time, 1st heat, 3m. 55s.—2d do. 3m. 54s.

Mary Randolph, the favorite, two to one against the field. The second heat was well contested and won by about two lengths.

THIRD DAY.

The race this day was one of the most interesting that has been witnessed on the Course since it has been reopened. The following horses started for the purse of $800, four mile heats:—

J. J. Harrison's Goliah, ...1 2 1
W. H. Minge's Lucy, ...4 1 2
W. R. Johnson's Andrew, ...2 3 3
J. Minge's Eliza Reilley, ...3 4 4
H. Meekins's Jane Shore, ...5 5 5
H. Davis's Dolly Dixon, ...6 6 6

First Heat—Eliza Reilley got the start, and kept it until she reached the goal in the third mile, when she was passed by Goliah and Andrew, who kept it throughout, lock-ing each other for some distance, when Goliah took the lead, and won the heat by about eighteen inches.

Time, 8m. 6s.

Second Heat—L. C. took the lead, and owing to some malvertence in the riders of Andrew and Goliah, was suffered to get so far ahead that they found it useless to contend, and held back for the third, letting L. C. win it with ease. After the heat was run, it was discovered that Andrew was lame in his right hind leg, and some fears were entertained that he was seriously injured.

Time, 8m. 14s.

Third Heat—Goliah got the start, followed closely by L. C. and Andrew; the former contending for the heat in beautiful style, and was beaten by about a length only.

Time, 3m. 9s.

There has seldom been seen so much interest evinced in any race as we have seen in this. The knowing ones were betting before the last heat two to one on Andrew against the field; but, so soon as the heat was won by Goliah, some few were trying to hedge in; the majority seem satisfied with the bets they had made on him, and a few offered to bet five to four on Andrew, against the field; but Goliah was too much for them.

A trotting match took place last week at the Hunting Park Course, near Philadelphia—Colt Purse, $300. One mile and a half, in three heats by a grey filly, time of first heat, 2m. 59s. 2d heat not ascertained.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Spirit of the Times.

SIR,—By inserting the following account of a Trotting Match at the Sand Hills, N. J. Nov. 3, 1832, for the Proprietor's purse, in your paper, will confer a favor on a number of your patrons. The following are the names of the horses entered for the purse:

Col. Johnson (of N. J.) g. h. Hazard,
Mr. Langstreth, ch. m. Miss Fry,
Mr. Gingling, g. h. House o' Fire,
Mr. Jaquess, g. m. Hannah Miller,
W. R. Jaques, b. m. Snow Storm.

First Heat—Started in good style, Hazard leading the first half mile, when he unfortunately swerved, and could not recover. Heat won by Miss Fry apparently easy.

Time, 2m. 53s. Course a little short of a mile.

Second Heat—Miss Fry took the lead—the dust being predigiously high is supposed to have been passed about half way by Hannah Miller, who gained the heat by a half neck only.

Time, 2m. 49s.

Third Heat—Hannah Miller won the heat in fair style, beating Miss Fry without difficulty.

Time, 2m. 51s.

Considerable quantity of money changed owners on the result of the race. Hazard was the favorite at first, and odds were bet in his favor, but owing to superior horsemanship, Hannah Miller succeeded in obtaining the purse.

Yours, A SUBSCRIBER.

Sand Hills, N. J. Nov. 6, 1832.

TROTTING MATCHES.

HUNTING PARK COURSE—Thursday, October 18th, 1832, being the day appointed for the first day's fall trotting at the Hunting Park Association course, the following horses started for the purse of $200, two mile heats, to the saddle:

Sally Miller, entered by John Nagle, rode by M. Vanderbelt.
Columbus, entered by Peter Whelan, rode by M. Whelan.
Comet, entered by George Woodruff, rode by Spicer.

When, upon the trial of speed, Columbus succeeded in winning the first and second heats, after a very hard contest. This was one of the most splendid trials of speed in trotting that was ever witnessed on this, or perhaps any other course.—Columbus and Sally Miller contending on both heats side and side; and, what is a little remarkable, neither of the horses breaking from their trot in either heat.

Time—first heat, 5m. 22s., second, 5m. 21s. Immediately after the saddle trot, the following horses started to trot three mile heats, to sulkey for the association purse of $200:

Screwdriver, (New-York horse) driven by Mr. Conking.
Medoff, (N. Y. horse) driven by Mr. Clintock.
Moonshine, (Philad. S.) driven by Whelan.
Pickle, (do. do.) driven by Woodruff.

Upon the trial of speed to sulkeys, Screwdriver succeeded in winning the first heat in a handsome manner, distancing Moonshine and Pickle, trotting his three miles in 8m 19s. When they started for the second heat they went off in good style, but it was very evident to the judges and bystanders that there was some foul play, as Screwdriver could pass his opponent upon any part of the track, and then the driver would pull up, and let the horse Medoff lap and pass him, so as to give Medoff the second heat. It was so notorious that the judges decided, that unless the drivers, upon the third heat, would resign their seats, and let the judges appoint two in their place, that neither of the two horses should start for the third heat, and, of course, the purse would be retained by the association. They declined doing so, and the contest remained with each horse winning a heat. There was no doubt remaining with the judges and bystanders but that the second heat was thrown away by Screwdriver, as the same possessed quite intelligible—it is a dead silence. However we will not attempt to check any expression of admiration, which is so popular, and which is supposed to be so requisite to elicit the utmost exertions of an actor.

THE AMERICAN.

MR. HAMBLIN has introduced at this Theatre "an entirely new musical drama, called Casco Bay, which has given general satisfaction. This play is full of spirit-stirring scenes, both in the tragic and comic line, but is by no means as popular as the "Cradle of Liberty." Many of the fighting scenes were pretty fair illustrations of what was going on out doors, and were attended by nearly the same consequences,—the hurrahs of the multitude, and the discomfiture of the parties.

The drama of the White Eagle is a most favorite affair here at this house, and Miss Waring, as Hazel Lance claims the warmest applause. She is fast gaining favor with the public, and will eventually become what her friends have anticipated, a graceful and clever actress.

We were glad to see Miss VINCENT announced to make her next appearance in the Drama of Catherine of Cleves. On Thursday she appeared and it was a most clever and effective performance. Whatever this talented "fairy of the Bowery" attempts in earnest, can hardly fail of being worthy of the high reputation she has already attained, and as Catherine of Cleves she more than fulfils our highest expectations. It will be repeated, and must add another to Miss Vincent's list of favorite characters. We invite our friends to witness it, and we are persuaded they will thank us for reminding them of such a treat.

Mr. Hamblin must not remit his exertions while he has to contend with the powerful attractions at the Richmond Hill and at the Park. His disappointment occasioned by Mr. Booth's illness should be remedied by engaging others of the various stars that are now within his reach. Our country never possessed as much theatrical talent as at this moment, and nothing short of the utmost liberality in our Managers will be satisfactory to our generously patronising community.

A writer in the London Literary Gazette furnishes an occasional article, entitled "A New Dictionary of the English Language." Some of the definitions prove the author to be the prince of lexicographers. There is a Lacon-like poignancy about the following which is not to be resisted:—

Abuse—The reward of the eminent and the notorious.

Criticism—Private malevolence under the cloak of public watchfulness.

Personalities—The resource of a baffled controversialist.

Quizzes—The tutest of all similes.

Pride—The incentive of strong minds,—the destruction of weak.

Introduce—A bait wherewith the rabble are caught.

Procrastination—The canker of the soul.

Reading—The cheapest and most lasting of all pleasures.

Two schooners arrived at New-Orleans from Tampico, with $100,000 in specie.

The Mechanics' Bank in Alexandria, D. C. has suspended payment.

The Parliament of Upper Canada commenced its session on the 31st of Oct.

Parts of this moment abounds with a vast number of good-natured men; there are 1523 printers, draftsmen, and lithographers, 154 sculptors, 310 engravers, 180 architects, 315 distinguished composers and professors of music, 1505 instrumental musicians, 1500 do. of inferior rank, total 5804.

A plan has been suggested in England for building a road about four miles distant from each other, on the principle of giving the occupants of each of which one to pay their rent by keeping a mile of road in repair.

There are fourteen hundred and ninety-two Post Masters in the state of New York, whose aggregate receipts are 312,000 dollars per annum.

The steamboat Monticello, Capt. Patterson, on her way down to New-Orleans, on the 4th ult. collapsed her flue. One or two lives were lost.

THE CAPE DE VERD SUFFERERS.—We are happy to state that the collections taken in many of our churches last Sabbath for the relief of the Cape de Verd sufferers, have appeared to the committee sufficient to authorize the purchase of 500 barrels of flour and meal, the freight of which to the Cape de Verd was offered by Messrs Spofford, Tileston & Co free of expense, and that it has been purchased accordingly. In a number of the churches it was found more convenient to postpone the collection until next Sabbath.—Journ. of Com.

A man named Hog, being condemned for murder, by Lord Brougham, humbly inquired his mercy be a Lord Hog? and that, observing it was not unlikely he might be a distant relation, from the similarity of the names, "No, no," said his lordship, "but can it be that any rate Hog in our House will at so high a station be hung before you can claim kindred with me."

OCTAVIAN.—A most diabolical attempt was made to assassinate Capt. Laines, post waddin at the Room Cambell, on Wednesday evening. As this gentleman was walking down the canal, a short distance from the basin, two pistols were suddenly discharged at him from behind but happily without effect, by a person concealed behind some bricks. In the confusion Capt. Laines, while reviving the word from his cane, fell into one of those holes that have been made by the travelling of the horse on the margin of the canal. While in this situation the assassin that had attempted to shoot him, began to beat Capt. L. upon the head with the butt of a pistol and a brick—but being seized by the leg the coffin was thrown into the canal, where he was picked up by a boat and rowed to the lower side of the canal. A horse was there in readiness, and upon him the assassin made his escape. The circumstances combined—the attack—the boat—the horse—all bespeak a premeditated assassination which was only frustrated by the superior strength of the intended victim. But results these, a placard was posted up in the neighborhood, a day or two previous, inviting Frenchmen and dogs to attend the funeral of Capt. Laines to-morrow morning." Suspicion we learn already points to a Captain Lee as the perpetrator of the foul deed. Captain Laines is very seriously wounded in the head.—New Orleans Bee.

The following item is from a lawyer's bill, supplied by a firm in Red Lion square, London. "For calling on Mr ——, but, unfortunately, did not find him at home, 6s. 8d." This same unfortunate circumstance also occurs five times in as many days.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.—One of the most capital errors ever made by a printer, was committed by a now extinct journal, in an advertisement of a brass founder, who having described the various works performed in his shop, was made to say in an N. B. "All others (orders) in the above business will be thankfully and promptly executed."

THE DRAMA.

THE PARK.

After an absence of some weeks Mr. and Miss KEMBLE have returned to our city, and have again appeared at this Theatre. The impression which they created during their first engagement was of that character to insure them the warmest welcome on their return. At an early hour the house was crowded with a most fashionable audience and the Dramas selected were of a character to excite the delight and approbation of the intelligence to express their delight at again beholding these distinguished illustrators of the Drama.

Milman's tragedy of Fazio was selected for the occasion,—Mr. KEMBLE playing Fazio for the first time. It was in this powerfully written play that Miss KEMBLE made her debut before an American audience, and well do we recollect the impression she produced. On the first representation Miss Kemble was miserably supported and we then imagined that Fazio was a most subordinate character, from which the tender, impassioned Bianca stood out in bold relief. In the hands of Mr. Kemble, Fazio appears entirely a different being—another Eugene Aram. A man of weakness, but yet redeemed in part by our sympathy in Bianca's love for him. Whatever she so ardently loved could not be altogether worthless, and thus in the development of the plot, Fazio evinces characteristics of excellence that veils in some degree his crimes, and renders Bianca's attachment for her husband not altogether unaccountable, and unnatural. The part is not entirely suited to Mr Kemble, but his mode of acting is so well calculated to enhance the interest and give scope and point to the striking passages in the play, that we doubt if any one could personate the character with any thing like the same effect.

But we have run before our story. The overture to Otello was played, and the curtain arose discovering both Father and Daughter seated in the study of an alchymist as busy as bees. The slight glimpse of those well-known features called forth a burst of rapturous greetings, that made "Old Drury" ring with welcomes. The compliment was felt and replied to most profoundly by both. The house then gradually hushed into silence as the silvery tones of that far enchanter rose like softest music, and soon all hearts even by its very tenderness. Those who have not heard Miss Kemble, can have no conception of the influence her voice and its melodious cadences exercise over the feelings of the audience. To be [illegible] characterized with a little monotony, but then it finds its way to the heart so effectively, that there is no resisting its watching power. A blind man would be enraptured, for it is not her music, nor the blandishments of a doating wife, nor her graceful attitudes, nor her inimitable gestures that so triumphantly transports all hearts. It is her voice more than all these put together. From the first to the last scene the effect was the same.

We have never seen a more sublime exhibition of passion than Miss Kemble's Bianca, and we can never expect to. The boldness to enumerate the points in this thrilling tragedy or be single out passages of superlative merit. Every scene tells and strikes home with a power that is irresistible.

From some cause the audience at this theatre have become chary of their applause. Surely it is not that they are not pleased. It is easier to suppose they are so fast in the bewilderment of their senses that they forget this expression of their gratitude and admiration. The opposite fault has been so freely condemned, and the filthy tones of applause are so instantly hissed into silence, that two thirds of the house have ceased to applaud at any time. That is, they do not clap their hands nor throw up their caps. But for our single selves, we think there is a species of approbation that is quite as flattering and a hundred times more sincere, which can be witnessed whenever Miss Kemble is portraying a scene of passion, and which to her must be quite intelligible—it is a dead silence. However we will not attempt to check any expression of admiration, which is so popular, and which is supposed to be so requisite to elicit the utmost exertions of an actor.

THE PARADISE OF FOOLS.—Mr. Lady, said a captain, when reading his orders to the crew on the quarter deck, to take command of a ship, there is one law I can do without to make, and I shall insist upon its being kept; indeed it is a favor with all of you, and which as a British officer I expect will be granted by a crew of British seamen—What say you my lads, are you willing to grant your new captain one favor? Aye, aye cried all hands, let know what it is, sir. Well, my lads, said the captain, it is this" that you must allow me to swear the first oath in the ship. No man on board must swear an oath before I do; I am determined to have the privilege of swearing the first oath on board. What say you, my lads, will you grant me this favor? The men stared, and for a moment, quite at a loss what to say. They were taken aback, one, all aback. They were brought up says another, "all standing."—The captain reiterated now, my fine fellows, this is a favor I ask, and I do have the privilege of swearing the first oath on board! The appeal seemed so reasonable and the manner of the captain so kind and prepossessing, that a general burst of the tars, oh! aye, aye, sir, aye, aye, sir, with their so usual three cheers. The effect was good;—swearing was wholly abolished in the ship.—English paper.

ACUTENESS OF HEARING IN ANIMALS.—Cats and dogs can hear the movements of their prey at incredible distances, and that even in the midst of noise, and of what would have bought would have overpowered such effects. Rabbits, when alarmed, forcibly strike the earth with their feet, by the vibrations of which they communicate their apprehensions to others very remote. As an instance of the discriminating power of the ear of the elephant, we may mention a circumstance that occurred in the menagerie conflict of shooting the unalterable elephant at Exeter Change. "After the soldiers had discharged thirty balls, he stopped and deliberately sunk on his haunches. Mr. Herring conceiving that a shot had struck him in a vital part, cried out, 'he's down, boys he's down!' and so he was only for a moment—He leaped up with renewed vigor, and at least eighty balls were thrown with the utmost force from different positions before he fell a second time. Previous to this he had nearly brought down an elephant, also a young bull, by throwing his two men out of their seat, and dashing the poor fellows to pieces against the walls of the room, in the midst of the crash of timber and the falling of the assailants, he recognised the voice of the keeper in his usual cry, "Chunee bite, Chunee bite!" which was his command to kneel, and the noble beast actually knelt and received a volley of balls that terminated his suffering.—Gardiner's Music of Nature.

THE RUSSIAN NEWS, NICHOLAS I.—What evil that could indignation or hatred, or scorn, furnish sufficiently expressive of the enormities of this man? Youth, old age, and innocence, fell equally before his ruthless barbarity. He has already transported to the wilds of Siberia, or order dto be butchered in savage revenge, 20,000 children, thus hellishly blasting in the bud the future joys of Poland, and whether his brutal vengeance by the blood of her gallant nobles. Out of the gloom of the hideous images that this court man's atrocities call up to the mind, I will take one. The widow of Kosciusko had two daughters, her only hope and fortune. Their father had nothing to leave them, but the inheritance of his patriotism, his bravery, and his virtue. She learned that the emperor (Nicholas) should not behem from her—her prayer was rejected. She then hoped, in the name of human nature and of God's mercy, that I now at least the widow of a knight-hero, she was again repulsed with a savage threat. The miserable mother, bereft of all earthly comfort, kissed her child, and in a fit of despair, poisoned her daughter and then it to is her. M. O'C nell's Speech at the Hackney Reform Dinner.

From the New-York American.

LINES—To the wise will understand them.

"A place in the memory, dearest,
Is a place that is seldom or cold;
And when you are asleep, this shall be your bequest,
Till we meet—here—after a while."

I have much dreary, so on corporate were trying
To deaden those days with their prose
And no wonder, I fear, I shall soon be going,
Of a long lasting siege to a rose

But the rose from its bed fogy nonsense
Shrinks through pity away,
Reserving her beauty and poisons
For the radiant noon of the day.

But rose on thy cheek and blossom
If thou hast power to wear
Thy sweetness only for the dear and the lover,
Alas, if thy bosom be bare,

Some one may steal thy sweet blossoms
Thy secretly in—consciously try —
Upon one's forehead some poisonous,
And valuably burn one, and fly.

But as Noah a dove, down, dropping
Of a resting place out of the ark,
Cast upon the waters, a signal—bearing
And olive branch back to the ark,—

Even so, after each ebullition
Of pleasure, of thy sweet
Return, as a token and signal of submission,
And ask but to wear it again.

"A place in thy memory, dearest,
A place in thy memory, dearest,
And when I am asleep, when yet thou wearest,
Till we after—here—after a while."

COUNT PIPER.

BILLY BLACK'S LAST.—Why is Mr. Forrest like his favorite Metamora? Do ye give it up! Because he is the son of a Forrest.

A DELICATE APPETITE.—A Jesuit one day found an old woman in extreme old age and at the point of death. Having catechised her, instructed her, as he conceived into the nature of Christianity, and completely taken care of her soul, he began to inquire whether there was any kind of food which she could eat. "Grandfather, said he, (that being the word of courtesy by which it was used to address old women) if I were to get you a little sugar now or a mouthful of some of our cakes, do you think you could eat it?" "Ah, my grandson, said the convert, my stomach goes against every thing there is but one thing which I think I could touch. If I had the little head of a little Tapin boy, I think I could pick the little bones; but alas, alas, me, there is nobody to go out and shoot one for me."

[This story, from Southey's Brazil, alludes to the early settlement of Jesuit missionaries in S. America, when they found the Indians with an almost insuperable attachment to cannibalism.]

MATRIMONIAL EMBLEMS.—We have often been amused at the various devices with which several of our contemporaries ornament their hymeneal departments. Thus, one of our exchange comes with a marriage-list preceded by a representation of two hearts, both pierced with one of Cupid's arrows,—the whole encircled with a wreath of roses, and attended by sundry other love-inspiring emblems. This looks quite romantic, and is something of an indication for one to perpetrate matrimony.

Another paper, however, and which, by the way, we strongly suspect to be edited by some grizzly old bachelor, "who is far from being a believer in matrimonial felicity, prec ded his hymeneal record by a picture of a pair of mice in a trap! Think of this, ladies! a pair of cupped mice! One who would thus outrageously caricature matrimony ought hem-if to be "caught and caged." And to have his heart stuck full of Cupid's arrows, if indeed it is not impenetrable to such soft things.

But worse than this another editor and one who, we suppose, considers matrimony the very antipodes of happiness shows the sensitiveness of his nature by disfiguring his couch and department with a cut representing an outside couple in the act of nuzling at each other's craniums and by sundry lines of household furniture, including the "three legged stool, "the tables, chairs &c. bring in "the confusion all" back as if they had passed the ordeal of a whirlwind; while some half dozen rag-d biped are peeping in the bottom from behind a door, whither they appear to have sought refuge.

We are quite at a loss to account for this diversity of opinion respecting matrimony, unless indeed, as in other cases, the conclusion is from experience, in which case we admit that they must be the best judges.

BENEDICT ARNOLD.—The name of this miscreant was justly associated by our fathers with every thing sordid and unprincipled in men; and will go down to posterity as only another name for treason and corruption. When George III. introduced this man to the gallant Earl of Balcarras, the latter took no notice of Arnold, but turning briskly to his sovereign exclaimed, "What! that traitor, sire!" For this indignity he was challenged by Arnold, and received his fire without deigning to return it but dared his hoaded pistol at the traitor's breast, saying, as he turned his back, "I leave you to the hangman."

AN ADVENTURE.—We learn, from a source entitled to implicit confidence, that two young gentlemen of Nassau county, early a few evenings ago, shared one of Gotham's hotels, of course without fire arms. During their excursion they heard an animal, which at first they supposed to be a Wild Cat, and forthwith adopted some means to effect its capture. Being provided with ropes they soon felled the tree, which bringing the victim to the ground, they attacked it with stones and such other missiles as were within reach, and succeeded in killing it; when, to their astonishment, they discovered it to be a full grown panther. It is probable that the panther was stunned by the fall of the tree, otherwise he had scarcely been so easily conquered—the young huntsmen, indeed, made a most fortunate escape, as in fair battle, it is probable that one or both of them would have been badly woo-ded, if not killed.—Long Island Farmer.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Spirit of the Times.

SIR,—By inserting the following account of a Trotting Match at the Sand Hills, N. J. Nov. 3, 1832, for the Proprietor's purse, in your paper, will confer a favor on a number of your patrons. The following are the names of the horses entered for the purse:

Col. Johnson (of N. J.) g. h. Hazard,
Mr. Langstreth, ch. m. Miss Fry,
Mr. Gingling, g. h. House o' Fire,
Mr. Jaquess, g. m. Hannah Miller,
W. R. Jaques, b. m. Snow Storm.

First Heat—Started in good style, Hazard leading the first half mile, when he unfortunately swerved, and could not recover. Heat won by Miss Fry apparently easy.

Time, 2m. 53s. Course a little short of a mile.

Second Heat—Miss Fry took the lead—the dust being predigiously high is supposed to have been passed about half way by Hannah Miller, who gained the heat by a half neck only.

Time, 2m. 49s.

Third Heat—Hannah Miller won the heat in fair style, beating Miss Fry without difficulty.

Time, 2m. 51s.

Considerable quantity of money changed owners on the result of the race. Hazard was the favorite at first, and odds were bet in his favor, but owing to superior horsemanship, Hannah Miller succeeded in obtaining the purse.

Yours, A SUBSCRIBER.

Sand Hills, N. J. Nov. 6, 1832.

CHINESE MANNERS.—The Carter, a weekly journal printed at Canton and edited by Mr. Wood of the U. S. gives the following as trans in the Chinese character, not wholly new, but fully confirmed:

"The exercise of hospitality is not in China considered necessary to the same extent as in Europe. Much of this feeling of selfishness and solitary enjoyment is to be immediately traced to the peculiar bonds of Chinese Education. One of the earliest precepts inculcated upon the youth of the Celestial Empire is, the paramount importance of strict attention to ceremonial observances.—The Chinese have very grave dissertations upon good manners, most elaborate treatises upon the management of fans and have not less reverence than those of the Medes and Persians, to regulate the precise quantity of civility which may be dispensed or expended upon individuals of particular ranks in society.—

"Women are never permitted to mingle in society, and in most cases the relative situations of husband and wife are more like those of master and servant. The Chinese ladies are perhaps more moral in their dispositions than their unbending lords, and removed from the restraint which their husband's presence imposes, are more cheerful than is generally imagined. Men, on the contrary, when assembled together, are [illegible] ceremonious, or rather entirely freed from the slightest restraint, their original being of the most riotous and unlicensed kind. The flower boats upon the river are the scenes of these nocturnal debauches, or the floating gambling shops, which are constantly crowded with adventurers."

From the Dublin Penny Journal.

An Italian gentleman residing in Liverpool, who has politely informed us that he is a constant reader of our Journal, after a few very handsome personal compliments, has chalk-ngel us to produce in all Irish poetry a match to the following "Aria" from Metastasio:—

AMOR TIMIDO.

Pianti la giovinetta,
Se trova il cuore ingrato,
Dica che non sa amare,
Ma non gli dirà di chi.
Lampeggi rimorso in volto,
Se sente il nome suo in bocca,
Dica che pensa a lei,
Ma non le dirà quale
Creda che sia il core.

TIMID LOVE.

Ah! gentle zephyr—ah! if ever
Thou find the unstressed my heart,
Tell me that it is a cruel one,
But never say where it dwells.
Let blushes rise in my face,
If thou mention my name to me,
Say that I think of thee,
But never say where my heart
Shall be the seat of love.

Having finished his speech, he made a stage exit, and left poor Hugh to settle with the bar-keeper. The youth's spirit arose with each new glass, and having paid the bill, he rushed, or rather staggered after the stranger, determining, if he were mortal flesh and bone "to punish it out of his hide." He encountered him at the door, and with a tone of honest indignation upon his countenance, thus accosted him, at the same time shoving signs of hostility by rolling up the cuffs of his sleeves: "I say, mister coxsoundas—you have served me unbecoming a gentleman, and"——

"Avaunt, and quit my sight! let earth hide thee!
Thy jokes are nauseous, thy breath a cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!
——What mean dost thou?
Approach not—take the Roman Sear,
The sword! Blasphemer, or the Hybrid tiger,
Take any weapon but that, and my firm nerves
Shall not tremble——
——Begone, horrible shadow,
Unreal mockery, begone."

The youth stood confounded; the pale gas flame fell upon the visage of the stranger as he spoke, and gave it so death-like an expression, that he seemed an incarnate being, a demon of the darkest order. Cold drops of sweat ran from Hugh's brow, his head became giddy, and with much effort he made out to follow the mysterious being, scarcely knowing what he did, through several small streets. The pursuit was vain; Hugh kept close to his heels, but in a dark and gloomy alley, the last glimpse he had of him, was at the moment he entered the cellar door beneath an extensive building.

Or here felt his courage up, and determined to follow, though there still remained an uncomfortable dizziness in his head, and a thousand fantastic objects danced before his vision. He opened the door through which the stranger had vanished, and feeling his way through a long damp passage, now and then faintly illuminated by pale, flickering lights, hanging "few and far between," sometimes he turned to the right and sometimes to the left, until he became completely bewildered. Slowly he groped through total darkness; the walls were cold and humid, and not a sound could be heard above that of his own quick and tremulous breathing and an occasional hiccup. At length he came to a door through which a feeble light shone, scarcely enough to penetrate the horrid gloom of the cavern, for such Hugh was convinced it was. He descended a short flight of steps—and his hand fell upon something cold as stone—it was a human skull! and his blood ran like an icy current through his veins, when he found that it lay upon a coffin. This was too much for the poor fellow; in agony of fear and perpexity, he rushed forward, his foot slipped and he fell into a dark pool, among rusty swords, daggers, &c. Whether through fright, or the effects of his late potent libations to the mercury god,—there he lay,—physically overpowered and morally bewildered. The horrors came upon him; cold drops bedewed his cheeks—his ears tingled—his lips quivered—and his eyes became weak with overstraining.

Of a sudden he heard a confused noise like a chaos of discordant sounds—gradually it became more pleasant, and his ears were enchanted with the softest harmony; pumberless Æolian harps seemed to be singing together the sweetest numbers of heaven. Presently the music became wilder and more hurried, and contained something that sounded like a bell was heard—when it suddenly stopped. Then came the trial for the unhappy Hugh—loud peals of thunder shook the "vaulted roof," and by the dim light of the distant lamp, he beheld methinks of uncouth figures pass hastily along—some with tail comical hats, some with long cloaks, and some with long wands; his heart sunk within him, for he had often heard his old grandmother describe the wicked witches that were former's so common in Connecticut. They vanished amidst the gloom, only to leave room for new and more appalling scenes. Two savage looking men met near the lamp; they were both clad in a strange kind of uniform, wore steel caps, and shaggy beards. Hugh quaked to the very finger nails as he listened to the following conversation.

"Where is my dagger?—I hav'nt dyed it in blood yet." "I saw it laying on King Henry's coffin. I wish you would let me have some of your blood, my own is too thick. I suppose I am to stab Banquo tonight?" "Yes, but I must alter my hardy face in the boiler yard." "My lord, his throat is cut, that I did for him."

Several of the witches here appeared, and and one laying her grisly hand upon the murderer's shoulder exclaimed in a sepulchral tone, "why had we not more thunder? the lightning did not flash in the right time—you should attend better to this business. Go get me the "pilot's thumb"—and taint that you have the cauldron ready to set fire to, when the thunder clap is heard—I do not wish to MISCE the matter. Here a shrill voice exclaimed, "witches, to your posts above!" and with a "heavi! hevi! hevi!" they vanished.

Poor Hugh Jackson lay between life and death; he mistook the last cry of the weird sisters for "Hugh!"—they had discovered him, and were then about working a spell upon him. The crimson streams of life ran feebly to and from his heart; already he imagined himself minced up and boiling in the terrible cauldron! Then he was awakened from his stupor by long and loud peals of sulphurous thunder, quick streaks of lightning, and a continued murmur of human voices—then a rolling noise like that of a drum—then a dead silence—then a hollow voice from above exclaimed,

"A drum, a drum;
Macbeth doth come."

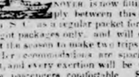
No sooner were the words spoken, than a most hellish noise almost deafened his ears, as if a thousand imps were beating on as many empty hogsheads—then sounds like the noisy capers of a water-mill, mingled with the hissing of snakes—the yells of legions of demons, and shouts of "silence!—down!" It was too much for the ill-fated Hugh to hear,—his senses left him. * * *

How long he lay in this state, he knew not. He opened his eyes—was he to witness new horrors. A bright and steady glare pervaded the haunted cavern; scaffolds, wheels, and ropes were arrayed before him—and black coffins were piled against the wall. But he did not shrink from these trials, they were of too mild a character among spirits of the other now came to torment him. He beheld a figure clad in white, as if just risen in his winding sheet; the sockets of his eyes were black and sunken,—his cheeks were livid—and fire's blood gushed from the gaping wound in his breast. He passed on, and another appeared dressed in armour with his throat cut from ear to ear! —giving a ghastly laugh, he turned to a spectre and said in a deep tone—"I was shamefully murdered tonight; curse the fellows,—if they had struck as I directed them, exactly into the blood bladder, the scene would have elicited great applause." What a malignified ghost, thought Hugh, as his trembling vision rested upon the spectre's pale features, wherein he thought he could trace those of the mysterious stranger of the period dressed, but his thoughts were interrupted by the same shrill voice he had heard before, crying "witches and ghosts—up—up!"—and they passed by in succession; some small apparitions, however, vanished through the roof of the vault, but re-appeared again, after having muttered some strange words to those below.

When this supernatural scene was at an end, Hugh determined to make an effort to make an effort to escape. He groped, and after several several severe trials, made his way from the horrible cavern into the open air. Blessing the sky and the fresh air, escaped from the jaws of darkness, he returned home and recounted to his father the adventures that had befallen him. The old man scratched his head, looked wise, and said "he didn't believe a word on it."—But Hugh insisted upon it, and concluded by declaring that to the laws of Connecticut had driven all the witches away from them parts, and they had settled among the more wicked folks of the city."

The reader will doubtless, ere this, have perceived that Hugh had actually found beneath the stage of a theatre, and had witnessed a part of the tragedy of Macbeth.

FOR CHARLESTON, S. C.



The Steam Packet Davis Brown, Capt. James Pease, now in her 10th trip to Charleston, will leave regular packets for passengers and light packages only, and will continue throughout the season to make two trips in each month. Her accommodations are spacious and convenient, and every exertion will be made to render the passengers comfortable. She will leave here on the above plan either on the 17th or 18th of the present month, at 10 o'clock A. M.

For passage apply at the office of the Howell Works Company, 261 Front street, or to the Captain on board, where also note can be had of Waterstreet, Corlears Hook. [illegible]

JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

SACKAHOA CO.

Over the Beaufort Course.

THE following Jockey Club Purses will be run for over the above Course, under the exclusive control and direction of the Stewards and Officers of the Club, commencing on the last Wednesday (the 30th) of January, 1833, being the annual meeting of the Club, and will continue four days. Free for any mare, horse or gelding of the U. States.

First Day.—Four mile heats, for a purse of 500 dollars.

Second Day.—Three mile heats, for a purse of 300 dollars.

Third Day.—Two mile heats, for a purse of 300 dollars.

Fourth Day.—Mile heats, the best 3 in 5,—purse, 200 dollars.

Weights, &c according to the rules of the Savannah Jockey Club.

A Sweepstake for Colts, two years old, to be run from May-day—2 mile heats—entrance $300 p. p. will be run for the day preceding the regular races, (Jan 29th.) Entries to be made with the Secretary only, and before the 1st of December next, at which time the Book will be closed.

A Colt is already entered.

RICHARD D. ARNOLD, Secy.

Miscellaneous.

IMPORTED HORSES

HEDGFORD & AUTOCRAT.

HEDGFORD Full Brother to Burning Sam. PEDIGREE.—He was bred by Mr. Stylton, in 1826, got by Filho da Puta—his Dam Miss Craigie, bred by Major Rower, in 1811, by Cicero, her Dam Marchioness of Lorne, Grandam Miss Cegrosun, by Pocomoonan—Young Marsk Sylva, &c. &.

He is a beautiful Dark Bloom, with black legs, having no white marks except a beautiful Star in the Forehead—he is 15 1-2 hands high, and for symmetry and muscular strength, not surpassed by any Horse.

PERFORMANCES.—In 1828 he won the Maiden Plate at Chester, beating Joceline and three other favorite Horses—the Gold Cup and a Sweepstakes at Nottingham. In 1829, the Meadows Plate at Chester. In 1830, the Cheshire Stakes of 25 Sovereigns each, 15 Subscribers—a stake of 10 Sovereigns each, with 40 added, 8 subscribers, and a 200 Plate at Wrexham. Among the numerous Horses which he beat are the following: Scarborough, Camelia, Silverlock, Stepfion, the Marshall, Nimrod, Mermaid, Stapely, Master Henry, Ultimatum, Fortitude, Nassau, Courier, Sandoval, Hazard, Spring, Effie, Rolls, and Lady Bird—all Crack Horses of the day.

FILHO DA PUTA, (the Sire of Hedgford,) was bred by Haphazard—his dam, Miss Partridge, by Waxy, Grandam by Woodpecker; Great Grandam Heimal, by Spilerel—Pinkepeas by Blank, &c. &c.

CASCO DA PUTA, won the great Doncaster St Ledger, in 1815—Orville, the Sire of Hedgford's dam, won the St. Ledger, in 1802, and Birmingham, full brother to Hedgford, won the St Ledger in 1825.

BIRMINGHAM'S winnings, exclusive of the St. Ledger, has been greater than any other 5 year old of the same day. Gentlemen who will take the trouble to examine the Racing Calender and Stud Book, will find that he is descended from a family of stout and true Runners, which will appear by the following brief sketch of the Performance of a few of Filho da Puta's get—viz, in 1823 ten were winners—in 1824, twenty were winners—in 1825, 17 do.—in 1826, 20 do.—in 1827, 22 do.—in 1828, 24 do.—in 1829, 25 do.—in 1830, 31 do.—in 1831, 27 do.—which gives to him the reputation of being the sire of more winning horses up to that date than any other Stallion in England—or can boast of having produced in the same length of time—among them may be noted Sherwood, The Agent, Fille de Joi, Pelisane, Alecta, Escape, Fair Rosaline, Hajji Baba, Miller of Mansfield, Orthodox, Arachne, Dr. Faustus, Elephanta, Hengrave, Maid of Mansfield, Forwester Lass, Harriet, Sangredo, His Grace, Astonishment, Retro Bedlam, Clarinewood, Columbia, Independence, Abel, Gallopade. His Highness, Bob-o, Sir Thomas, &c. His winners amounted to upwards of two hundred and forty.

THE MAGNIFICENT GREY HORSE

AUTOCRAT.

Bred by the Earl of Derby, in 1822—16 1-2 Hands high—of great substance and Muscular form.

PEDIGREE.—He was got by Grand Duke; his dam Dilvetta, by Sir Oliver; Grandam Scotinia, by Dolphina; her dam Scota, by Eclipse, Herod, &c. &c.

GRAND DUKE, was a well known racer, bred by Sir F. M. Stanley, and got by Arch Duke, son of Hand Maid by John Bull. Arch Duke was bred by Sir F. Standish, and got by Sir

The Casket.

"A bouquet of culled flowers, with nothing of ourown but the thread that ties them."

BEN BUSKIN.

[Everybody writes like Tom Hood now.]

Ben Buskin was a fat young man,
An actor, too, was he—
A very great one in his line,
Which eke was tragedy—
Though sometimes funny parts he took,
Falstaff he was no mouth in;
Which, like the feast scene in Macbeth,
He acted without stuffing.

His forte even was light comedy,
Though fourteen stone he weighed;
And, being of a roundish build,
A star he sometimes played.
As Hamlet, in the leading scene,
He always made a hit—
And when he died he surely drew
The pity of the pit.

The more he played the jealous Moor,
The more his scene written fell—
Will answer his Stranger was, because
He ate the part so well.
That he would think it four pounds of beef,
He rips and dotes half—
He ate the stakes and then the "lean
And hungry Cassius" played.

Now Cupid often had essayed
With love to make him flutter—
But found his heart was like a pear
Stuck in a cask of butter.
So, finding all his longest bows
Too short to reach his dart,
He shot him with a lovely belle,
Who measured six feet two.

One night, when he was on the stage,
He glanced into the pit,
And thought he saw a pillar move,
With a bonnet tilted on it.
He looked again, and soon perceived
What first he took for a pillar,
Was coming every eyes upon him,
While he was acting Lear.

Although no foot was Mrs. Pole,
We'll, you see, call her,
Ben straightway longed long Mrs. Pole
Should be his partner in life;
Where walking out, next year, he saw
A shadow by his side—
And, looking up a fine form off,
His dear long Pole he spied.

A run he took, and shortly reached
His long, lank relative, for pitter—
"And pray," said he, "what glance down upon
A newish wife for thee does?"
Said Poly Pole, while looking round,
"I'll anybody speak?"
"Oh, yes!" cried he, "is one who dares
Your highness' smiles to seek."

[The next three stanzas paint the mal-apropos appearance of Mrs. Pole's husband, a tall soldier.]

And now Ben went to Polly Pole,
To try to intimate her—
So walked from Pole to Pole, just like
A commonsaypator.
In vain Ben tried to quell his rage—
Pole said, with many an oath,
"If I'marry thee I'm a life guard's man,
I'd be the death of both."

And, with a stick, to Buskin's back
Some heavy blows he lent—
And, though a sergeant, treated him,
With corporal punishment!
Against the wings poor Ben's fat sides
The sergeant's stick implies—
To those who saw his back he seemed
A very Prince of Wales.

The sergeant then took Polly Pole,
And in his hand he caught her,
And dragging off his belle, half,
He lodged her in his quarters—
Though Ben had stood against long Pole,
He couldn't stand Death's dart—
The sergeant broke poor Buskin's bone,
And Polly broke his heart

From the London New Entertaining Press.

THE PRESS.

The Press—the Press—the glorious Press,
It makes the address free
Before it freezes prostrate fall,
And proud oppressors flee
In world's state of wretchedness,
Without it, slaves be—
And, without it, free, too highly prize
The science of liberty

The Press—the Press—the glorious Press,
Religion's ever friend,
And she's a ray of happiness
Of her various kind—
For, she, drives from his throne
His dull, cold realm of light,
And over the world now diffused
A deep, yet heavenly light!

The Press—the Press—the glorious Press,
What tongue are due to thee,
When all tyrants do quench its beams
Triumphantly opposed
Tell, in letters of the scroll of fame—
The garland of renown!
The honour of a deathless name—
A world's fading crown!

At the Middlesex sessions, as Mr. Alley was handing Mr. Phillips a book, it accidentally fell, and alighting on the toes of Mr. Adolphus, the latter roared out—"What the plague's that?" "A volume on the corn laws," said Mr. Alley.

The parsimony of Lord Kenyon was notorious. The subject being once started in conversation, some one observed, that Lord Kenyon had never been known to give a single bottle of wine to a friend. "But I have (says Cowper) known him to give one to a dozen."

Cowper went to the Oxford Circuit with Lord Kenyon, the irritability of whose temper involved him in frequent bickerings with the members of the Circuit. On one occasion, having exhibited great irritation of manner, the Judge said to him, "Pray, Mr. Kenyon, keep your temper." "My Lord," observed Mr. Cowper, "you had better recommend him to part with it as soon as he can."

Proof of being Righteous.—A man, last winter, or some other time, when the weather was frosty, coming out of a tavern a little "blue," lost his footing, and came down plump on the doorstep. Endeavoring to regain his feet, he said—"We read that the wicked stand on slippery places. I therefore must be one of the righteous, for hang me if I can stand."

Epicurism.—The passionate love of good eating, and the brutal species of wit which distinguished Quin, a celebrated actor, furnished many anecdotes in his day. He was invited to dine with a duchess who delighted in the company of men of talent. To the surprise of Quin, she helped herself to the leanest part of a haunch which stood before her. "What! and does your grace eat no fat?" "Not of venison, sir." "Never, my lady duchess?" "Never, I assure you." Too much affected to restrain his genuine sentiments, the epicure exclaimed, "I love to dine with such hosts."

Shuffering Letter.—A certain old woman took from the post office in the town of G——, a letter. Not knowing how to read, and being anxious to know the contents, supposing it to be from one of her absent sons, she called on a person near, to read the letter to her.—He accordingly began and read:

Charleston, June 23, 1832.

"Dear Mother"—then making a stop to find out what followed (as the writing was rather bad) the old lady exclaimed, "O 'tis from poor Ben, my always shuffered"

A Man Milliner.—The following account is given by a late traveller, of the manner in which the Tartars are measured and fitted to a new suit:

I approached, says he, a group of Tartars assembled round a dead horse, which they had just skinned. A young man about eighteen, who was naked, had the hide of the animal thrown over his shoulder. A woman, who performed the office of tailor with great dexterity, began cutting the back of this new dress, following with her scissors the round of the neck, the fall of the shoulders, the semicircle which formed the sleeve, and the side of the habit, which was intended to reach below the knee. She proceeded in the same manner with the other parts, till the cutting out was finished; the man who had served as mould, then crouched on his hams, while the several pieces were stitched together, so that in less than two hours he had a good brown-bay coat, which only wanted to be tanned by continual wearing.

The Atlas of Thursday contains the following singular advertisement:—

"A certain gentleman is not what he ought to be."
A North End Suit Maker."

This is true of a vast number of the human family. We do not know to whom the advertiser refers, but we can add that there are many gentlemen who are not what they PRETEND to be.—N. E. Galaxy.

Madam Letitia, the mother of Buonaparte, was at the point of death. Her will occasioned much speculation, as her property is very large. The bulk of it, estimated, after paying all the legacies, at about $15,000,000, she leaves to the eldest in the male line of the Buonapartes in perpetual entail. Joseph is the present heir.

Patronage.—An old woman was lately seen wending her way up one of the streets of St. Andrews, (Fifeshire.) It was manifest from her demeanor that her whole soul was occupied with a subject of importance. At last, after surveying carefully around, she came to an anchorage immediately opposite Bailie T——'s counter, when the following dialogue ensued:—B. "Weel, Janet, what's awanting the day?" Janet, (eyeing the Bailie with a searching look of inquiry,) responded, "Ou, no that muckle; but there's ae thing I want to ken before I mak or mend wi' ye. Will ye tell me if ye be a Tory?" B. "A Tory, Janet! What for? Am a Whig, woman, an' I ha'e just pledged myself to vote for Mr. Johnston." Hereupon Janet's fingers, which had hitherto been closely rolled up in her palm, began to unfold; and laying down the king's coin on the Bailie's counter with an air of satisfaction and unbounded patronage she proceeded, "Then my man, gi'e me a bawbee's worth o'your mustard!"

If you make money your god, it will plague you like the devil.

PRINTING.

CHECKS, Cards, Handbills, Circulars, and Printing of every description, neatly and expeditiously executed at this office.

GOLD & SILVER LEAF MANUFACTORY.

No. 67 Watts street.

GEORGE S. WAITE, offers for sale gold and Silver Leaf, and Gold, Silver and Copper Bronzes of superior quality, at the lowest cash price, at the manufactory, No. 67 Watts street.

DANCING ACADEMY,

City Saloon, Marble Buildings, Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church.

MR. & MRS. TRUST have the honor to announce to their patrons and the public, that they have engaged the above splendid building, where they will re open their DANCING and CALISTHENIC ACADEMY, on the first of November next. The superior eligibility of this newly erected establishment, its extent and splendor, combining privacy with every possible public convenience which can be wished for in a building, the original construction of the spacious and lofty saloon for the transmission of sound, without "bewildering echoes and discordant jars," altogether forming a Music Hall, and Concert Saloon, with its suite of rooms, unrivalled in the United States. To make it so, however, has been the aim of the enterprising proprietor, how far he has succeeded, the public will judge when it is opened.

The experience and great success of Mrs. Trust, as teacher in this city of the varied styles of fashionable dances, viz Cotillions, Gallopades and Waltzing, in exact conformity with the system of the European artistes, will, she confidently presumes, recommend her exclusively to the patronage of the ladies and the parents of pupils, in whom instruction she is confessedly felicitous.

Mrs. T. would also respectfully impress on the minds of parents who have objections against dancing, the importance of the Calisthenics, or Grecian exercises, as a substitute, for the removal of every awkward and embarrassing appearance peculiar to young ladies on their first entering into polished society, giving in exchange a graceful and easy carriage, and above all, imparting to them health and vigor. Should any lady wish to make herself acquainted with the utility of the Calisthenic Exercises, previous to becoming or recommending a pupil, Mrs. Trust will be happy to explain the nature of them by personal illustration, on the opening of the school.

Gentlemen patrons are informed that a teacher of acknowledged practical eminence is now on his passage from Europe, and is engaged as an assistant in the Gentlemen's Classes, and no efforts will be wanting to render them satisfaction equal to any they would receive at other establishments. Pupils and parents will have the privilege of attending the Weekly Assemblies, for which the distinguished New-York Cotillion Band is engaged.

Schools and Private Classes attended. Days of tuition, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and evenings. The Grecian Exercises in the morning. Terms, $10 per quarter.

Mr and Mrs T. having made every possible endeavor to render this institution deserving an extended public patronage, they have sanguine expectations that their utmost hopes will be abundantly realized.

A private subscription Ball, once a fortnight, is in contemplation. Arrangements have been made with the stage proprietors for the convenance to and fro of up-town pupils free of expense. Subscription Book at No. 52 Howard-st

Oct 27 tf

MUSIC,

At Peale's Museum & Gallery of the Fine Arts, Broadway, opposite the Park

THE KENDALLS are engaged for a short time, to delight the company with their exquisite performance on the Harp French Horn, and improved French Flageolet during the evenings

The working model of the Novelty Steam Carriage, lately exhibited at Niblo's Garden, is deposited for a short time in the Museum

Amongst the Paintings may be particularly noticed a full length portrait of Napoleon by Lefevre Oct 13

S. J. SYLVESTER will conduct the Lottery and Exchange Business, at his new store, corner of Fourth and Wood-streets, where he will be pleased to see his correspondents when they visit Pittsburgh. Letters may be addressed as usual.

S. J. SYLVESTER.
Pittsburgh, Pa.

AN APPRENTICE WANTED.

A BOY who can come well recommended, may hear of a situation at the printing business, by applying at No. 35 Wall-street (upstairs)

Miscellaneous.

TO DENTISTS.

GOLD, Silver, Platina, and Tin Foils of superior quality, and warranted, are offered to the Dentists at the lowest prices, at the manufactory, No. 67 Watts street, by

GEORGE S. WAITE

SAMUEL PHILLIPS,

AUCTIONEER for the City and County of New-York, attends personally to the Sales of Furniture in any part of the City; also, Real Estate, Ships, Merchandize, &c. &c. Office, 100, Broadway, where all orders will be thankfully received and punctually attended to Saddles, Harness, Trunks, &c.

J. B. Carter 113 Bowery returns sincere thanks to a generous public and in particular to gentleman of the Turf, both in this and neighboring cities, for their liberal and increasing patronage. He has on hand and is constantly manufacturing, light pleasure harness of every description, Racing and Trotting Saddles, Bridles, Whips, Spurs &c., together with almost every article in his line of business, all of which will be sold at his usual low prices. June 23, 1832

PARTHENON

Reading Room and Circulating Library

THE subscriber begs leave to call the attention of every class of readers to his Library. It being very extensive, and amply supplied with works in every department of Literature, it will be found to afford a cheap and easy method of access to all the most valuable books in the English language. The collection of Periodical publications is unequalled. A primary object also, of the proprietor, will be to furnish the subscribers with a more immediate and regular supply of New Publications, than has hitherto been attainable, and for this purpose a large number of each will be secured, as they issue from the press

The connexion with the Library of an amply provided Literary Reading Room, offers great advantages; as for much less than the cost of one single Loaning rods will the subscriber have British and ten to fifteen American periodicals besides Newspapers may be read. Both Library and Reading Room are kept open from an early hour in the Morning till ten at night. The room is furnished with the Morning and Evening papers of the city—papers from the principal cities and towns of the United States and Canada, and a large collection of Foreign and American Periodicals. Duplicates of most of these are also taken, as soon as they are published, for the use of the Library

CHARLES S. FRANCIS, Book-seller and Stationer, No. 252 Broadway.

EXTRAORDINARY

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION,

On the Cerebrated Gowandonian System,

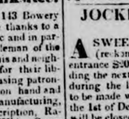
371 1-2 Grand Street.

BEING a new, thorough and rapid method of teaching new beginners, and others who are heartily tired of, disgusted with, and see little or no improvement, in the old, long, irksome, tiresome, and very expensive system of other teachers, invented by I. Goward, A. M. Professor and Practical Teacher of it, 371 1-2 Grand street, New-York City, whereby more may positively be easily acquired in barely SIX LESSONS or HOURS, or ONE LESSON of six hours, than in YEARS of vexatious drilling on that monopolizing old system which is just fit to torment pupils' heads and drain their pockets'—upon the Piano Forte and Spanish Guitar with Singing, Flute, Flageolet, Clarinet, Violin, Bass Viol, &c. &c.

☞ N. B. One word to people of sense—Citizens of New-York, I have been with you nearly 4 years, in which time I have taught thousands on my new System, but I hope you will pardon me if I ask you one quizzical question after being quizzed by you for nearly 4 years—namely, How is it you refused to read my advertisements, or if you did read, did you not think it a puff and have you not listened to those who were enemies to improvements (or innovations as you would call them) if so, have you not cheated ourselves and been cheated out of that knowledge of Music which you in the honesty of your souls would have pronounced.

Invaluable and Real, yet

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS!



TO AMATEURS OF MUSIC.—Mr. Gowan respectfully informs the Ladies who are proficients on the Piano Forte or Guitar that he joins accompanying Lessons with the Flute and in accompanying Lessons with the Flute that he also informs amateurs of the Flute that he is in the daily habit of touching the embellishments of this most beautiful instrument (and other instruments) after the manner of Wragg, Nicholson, Alexander, Dressler, Cuddy, himself, &c. &c.

N. B. YOUNG LADIES are taught in a few lessons to sing Songs, Glees, Catches, Sacred Pieces (by rote) in a perfect correct and fashionable style—also to play together on the same instrument. Sacred Music is taught every Sunday such as for Tenor, Salmon, Pike, and other fishing, to no more cost to mention. Also—2 or 300,000 of Hemming's best steel Fish hooks and a large assortment of fine Linen Cambric Handkerchiefs, Savannah cotton, for fishing and reed making, all of which may be had wholesale and retail.

P. S. It would be an advantage to those wishing to purchase to call and select such articles of Tackling as they would wish in his line, as they would get a bargain

N. B. Just received—a large quantity of superior fresh Silk-worm Guts, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms

ABR'M BROWER.
230 Water street

PERCUSSION CAPS.

TO SPORTSMEN.—The subscriber has just received and offers for sale The Improved Percussion Cap—the charges and construction of which is, on explosion, to prevent the caps from flying into fragments thereby protecting the shooter from accident to the face, eyes, hands, &c.

Also, the Scientific Self-defender, (suitable for the meridian of Washington)

LEWIS.
☞ Wall-street, No. 3, corner of New-st opposite the Wall-street church

 VISITING and ADDRESS CARDS of every description engraved and printed in a superior style at the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms. June 26.

TO SPORTSMEN.

JUST Received—Hunter on Shooting or Instructions to Young Sportsmen—in all that relates to guns and shooting—difference between the Flint and Percussion System—Preservation of Game—Getting access to all kinds of Birds—Specific directions with new apparatus for Wild Fowl Shooting, both on the coast and in fresh water—new directions for Trout fishing, and advice to young Sportsmen on various other subjects, by Lieut. Col. Hawker 6th edition in Six enlarged and improved with 30 fine plates and wood cuts

Col Hawker is one of the best shots in England, and his Instructions to Sportsmen" the very best book we have on the subject.—Blackwood's Magazine.

☞ A few copies of this valuable work imported and for sale by Peabody & Co. 219 Broadway 2 doors from St. Paul's Church.

R. N. WHITE,
Pocket Book and Morocco Fancy Article Manufacturer, corner of William and Liberty Streets New York

The Autumn Races.

JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Waynesborough, Geo

WILL commence on Tuesday, 11th of December next and continue four days.

First Day—Two mile heats for a purse	$500
Second Day—Two mile heats for	250
Third Day—Mile heats three best in five for a handsop purse worth	200
The race free for any horse
Fourth Day.—Mile heats, free only for horses foaled in Burke county, for a purse	$100 to $150

☞ Editors friendly to sport of this kind, will please republish the above.

JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Savannah, Ga.

A SWEEPSTAKE for Colt's two years old, (reckoning from May-day)—2 mile heats—entrance $300 p. p. will be run for the day preceding the next regular races, which will take place during the last week in January next. Entries to be made with the Secretary any time before the 1st of December next, at which time the Book will be closed.

A Colt is already entered.

RICHARD D. ARNOLD, Sec'y

JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Jerusalem, Va.

WILL commence on the 3d Tuesday in November and continue four days

First Day.—A sweepstake, for 3 year olds, who never won a race—mile heats—$100 entrance, half forfeit—4 or more to make a race. Subscribers: James J. Harrison, S. Bryant—to close 25th of October.

Second Day.—Proprietor's Purse—$250—two mile heats—entrance $15.

Third Day.—Jockey Club Purse $500—four mile heats—entrance $20.

Fourth Day.—A poststake, 2 mile heats—$100 entrance, half forfeit, free for all ages.

An elegant saddle will be put up, to be run for on the 4th day, mile heats

RICHARD S. NICHOLSON,
Proprietor.

THE JOCKEY CLUB RACES,

(Memphis, Ten.)

WILL commence on Thursday the 11th day of November next, four days running. First day, two mile heats, purse $200. Second day, three mile heats, purse $300. Third day, mile heats, 3 best in 5, purse $200. Fourth day, a sweepstake for any horse, mile and martingale—The money will be hung up at the poles each day, and delivered by the Judges to the winning horse. Free for any horse, mare or gelding, according to rules. The track is equal to any in the state; first rate stables and accommodation can be had in the town. By order of the Board,

MARK B. SAPPINGTON, Sec'y.
Memphis, Oct 9, 1832

A CARD.

New-York Gymnasium, No. 29 Ann-Street.

W. FULLER begs leave to remind gentlemen returning from the country, and particularly those whose pursuits require close application, that the surest method of retaining the health and vigor acquired by a sojourn in, and the amusements of, the country may have given them, is by having daily recourse to some active bodily exercise, which is likewise the best safeguard against attacks of the pestilence which still lurks in our city.

The institution he has the pleasure of conducting affords every facility and convenience for attaining objects so desirable, and he begs that they will take an opportunity of examining it for themselves. To his subscribers he presents his compliments, and hopes that they will be general and regular in their attendance.

P. S. Fencing and Sparring upon the most approved principles taught at the Gymnasium.

☞ "Gymnastics," by Wm Fuller, price 25 cents.

TROTTING COURSE,

Mount Vernon, near New-York City.

THE public are respectfully informed that a Course has been selected for over this course on the 1st of NOVEMBER next, to commence at 5 o'clock every week thereafter, on THURSDAYS, until notice is given to the contrary in "The Spirit of the Times and Life in New-York." The Course remains open for private Matches and for Training; and Sporting gentlemen are respectfully invited to avail themselves of the advantages which it offers

WILLIAM OLIVER, Proprietor.
Oct. 13, 1832

TO SPORTSMEN

Of Tennessee and Kentucky

NOTICE is hereby given to the sportsmen of each of the above named States, that the subscriber has opened a RACE TRACK at Columbus, Adair county, Ky. which is said to be, by persons who are experienced in the business of racing, and who have had frequent opportunities of knowing, a most excellent course superior to none, now in either of the States. If the Lexingtonians and Nashvillians, they whom it is believed, own and run the best horses in their respective States, will but attend, they will be pleased and meet upon half way ground, the Columbia Turf is the place. If any number of men with their horses, wish to be accommodated, when they come to Columbia, to the racer or racers, accommodation will be made for them. He occupies the large and commodious brick building, formerly occupied as a Tavern by John Graham, and has supplied himself amply with every thing necessary for the entertainment of travellers.

m 61 JAMES MOORE

THE KNICKERBOCKER,

OR
NEW-YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

PROSPECTUS—Peabody & Co. propose commencing at an early day the publication in Philadelphia, of a Monthly Magazine. The work, when fairly established will consist of Tales, Reviews and Essays, with notices of the Arts, Views of Society at home and abroad; Contributions on the Fashions and temper of the times, Gleanings from the least accessible of foreign publications, and the earliest On-dits in literary, sporting, and fashionable circles. But above all to reflect life and literature as displayed in this Metropolis shall be the principal object of

The Knickerbocker, or
NEW-YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE

☞ Each number will contain twenty four quarto pages of letter press, printed with an entirely new and beautiful type, procured expressly for the work. The paper, of the finest American manufacture, will be of the same quality with that used in the Annuals, and stitched in an elegant tinted cover. The greatest attention in short will be paid to its typographical appearance, while superior Engravings will from time to time ornament and enrich the publication

☞ Terms of Subscription, Four Dollars per annum, payable on the delivery of the fourth number.

Should the completion of their subscription list barely enable the publishers to commence the Magazine, the contents of the earlier numbers will be one half original and the remainder selected, but should the publication meet with the success that is anticipated, it will gradually assume an entirely original character. The publishers being prepared, if met in their designs by the public, to engage the acknowledged talent in the country, and call out latent ability, at an expenditure hitherto unprecedented on this side of the Atlantic. They must meet with countenance themselves, however, before they can venture to bestow patronage, though perfectly content that all the profits of the work shall go to improve its character. In the meantime, without mentioning the names of the able contributors who have courteously pledged their aid, they feel warranted in stating that arrangements have been made, which will enable them to commence their undertaking, under literary auspices the most favorable

PEABODY & CO.
219 Broadway, New York

S. J. SYLVESTER & Co.

No 33 Baltimore-street, Baltimore, Md.
And Wood-street, Pittsburgh, Pa

MESSRS YATES & M'INTYRE, having succeeded in purchasing the grant of the Maryland State Lotteries, a scheme of Class No 17, to be drawn in Baltimore, on Saturday, Nov 9th is presented to our customers, for which we ask a consideration. Having an office as above we shall be enabled to afford every facility to adventurers

It will be remembered that when $10 and upwards are remitted, postage need not be paid, but correspondents are urgently requested to send notes of as large denomination as possible, frequently happens that the postage charge deprives us of all profit. Our friends are aware that when a package is sold, a deduction is always made from the full price, and when a certificate is ordered, the difference between the cost and warranty need only be forwarded. It is respectfully suggested to adventurers that by ordering certificate, whether of package or loose tickets, they will save themselves much return postage—in such cases the tickets are always sealed up and held for the benefit and subject to the order of the owner

Sporting Stores.

FISHING TACKLE STORE.

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully informs his friends and the public that he has removed his store from No 305 Pearl street to No 52 Fulton-street, where he offers for sale a general assortment of Fancy Articles in the Hardware line; also a complete assortment of Fishing Tackle, consisting of almost every article in the line, viz fly and river rods, brass and wood reels, sinkers, floats, swivels, silkworm gut, Black, Bass, Perch, Trout, Pickerel, and a variety of other fish hooks too tedious to name. Hooks fastened on gut, gimp, grass, hair silk and flax lines, gut leaders, a variety of artificial baits, such as Shrimp, Minnow &c. Trout, Herring and Salmon Flies New-London and other lines of every description.

Also a general assortment of Powder, Shot and Flints. Where also may be had a constant supply of Macdonald's Paste and Liquid Blacking, J Durell's writing ink, both superior articles.

T W HORSFIELD.
No 52 Fulton street.

HINTON'S WAREHOUSE & MANUFACTORY,

194 Broadway, N. Y.

WHERE may be had in large or small quantities, on reasonable terms, the following articles: Military Caps of gold, gilt, silver plated and other trimming Plumes and pompons of every color, size and description. Swords and belts suitable for cavalry, artillery, infantry or navy officers. Gold, silver, gilt and plated Epaulettes of all patterns, do Wings, and worsted do —do Tassels, do of all sizes do Laces, different qualities. Muskets, cartridge boxes and belts, dirks, belt and pocket pistols, fencing foils, masks and boxing gloves Pocket pistols, housings, holsters, bridles, and all the variety of military horse equipments.

FOWLING ARTICLES

Double and single guns, Damascus, stub and twist, and plain barrels, (made by the most celebrated gun makers in London,) flint and percussion rifles, English and American gunpowder in canisters; percussion caps and fitters; shot and flints; powder and drinking flasks, and caps; bullet pouches, powder horns and bullets, shot and game bags, leather gun and pistol cases; and game bags, leather cartridge boxes and belts, dog chains, collars, and calls percussion and flint locks, and general assortment of gun mountings

FISHING TACKLE

Trout and river rods of all descriptions, walking cane rods, India grass, hemp, silk and hair lines of all lengths. Single and multiplying reels, silkworm gut, gimp, grass, hair, first quality of Limerick and Kirby hooks on hair and engine twisted hair, artificial flies, fishes, devels, frogs, mice, floats, hoop nets &c. &c. composing a complete assortment of fishing tackle.

TO TRAVELLERS.

Manufactured and for sale as above, travelling trunks, valises and carpet bags of the best quality.

N. B. Flint locks percussioned and guns and pistols repaired in the neatest manner and at the shortest notice.

TO SPORTSMEN.

THE SUBSCRIBER offers for sale a general assortment of Select Fishing Tackle—Consisting of superior Trout, Fly, and River Bag-rods; do Walking Cane Rods; best Multiplying Reels, Landing and Gaffing Nets; patent India grass, Flax and Hair Lines of all lengths; Silk-worm, Gut, Stretchers Swivel Sinkers; Improved Limerick and Kirby Hooks; Artificial Flies; do Fishes, Plotts &c. All the above articles are expressly adapted to the Sports of this Country. LEWIS.
No. 3 Wall-st, cor New-st, opposite the Church

 Visiting and Address Cards engraved and printed.

FISHING & FOWLING TACKLE

CHARLES S. TAYLOR, No. 1 1-2 Maiden Lane, near Broadway New-York—Gun Grease, Hare Skin and Powder Flasks, Hickory, Ash, Hazel, and Bamboo Rods, either solid or in the Walking Stick, for Fly and other fishing Single and Compound Reels of superior quality Hoops and Mounting—Fishing Baskets—Artificial Baits of all kinds—Fish hooks of every description. Swivels, brass or steel—Swivel Leads—Bait Needles—Disgorgers—Bait Boxes—and Floats of all sizes.

Also—Single and Double Barrelled Guns and Pistols of various qualities Shot Belts, single and double—Powder and Liquor Flasks—Powder Nutts—Cleaning Rods—Wad Cutters—Nipple wrenches and Turn screws—Dog whips and calls—Dog collars of all sizes—Drinking cups—and Pocket lights. Sportsmen's apparatus consisting of Knife Fork, Spoon, Cork-screw Powder of the best quality, and all sizes of Shot.

Swords, Dirks, Epaulets and Plumes also a variety of articles in the Hardware and Cutlery line

FISHING TACKLE STORE.

THE subscriber begs leave to return his grateful thanks to his patrons and friends for the encouragement he has thus far received in his endeavors to establish permanently a cheap Fishing Tackle store and also hopes that they will still favor and sustain him with the same—he also begs leave to inform them that he has constantly on hand a very great quantity of Fishing Tackle, all of which is fitted up in the most elegant and perfect style and a large assortment of Canton and Calcutta, Bamboo Fishing rods with or with out Joints, for Fly and other fishing Grass, Gut silk and Hair lines of English and American manufacture, swivel sinkers, Hooks, Floats and other lines, they can call on the subscriber—He occupies the large and commodious brick building, formerly occupied as a Tavern by John Graham, and has supplied himself amply with every thing necessary for the entertainment of travellers.

m 61 JAMES MOORE

THE KNICKERBOCKER.

OR
NEW-YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE

PROSPECTUS—Peabody & Co. propose commencing at an early day the publication in Philadelphia, of a Monthly Magazine. The work, when fairly established will consist of Tales, Reviews and Essays, with notices of the Arts, Views of Society at home and abroad; Contributions on the Fashions and temper of the times, Gleanings from the least accessible of foreign publications, and the earliest On-dits in literary, sporting, and fashionable circles. But above all to reflect life and literature as displayed in this Metropolis shall be the principal object of

The Knickerbocker, or
NEW-YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE

☞ Each number will contain twenty four quarto pages of letter press, printed with an entirely new and beautiful type, procured expressly for the work. The paper, of the finest American manufacture, will be of the same quality with that used in the Annuals, and stitched in an elegant tinted cover. The greatest attention in short will be paid to its typographical appearance, while superior Engravings will from time to time ornament and enrich the publication

☞ Terms of Subscription, Four Dollars per annum, payable on the delivery of the fourth number.

Should the completion of their subscription list barely enable the publishers to commence the Magazine, the contents of the earlier numbers will be one half original and the remainder selected, but should the publication meet with the success that is anticipated, it will gradually assume an entirely original character. The publishers being prepared, if met in their designs by the public, to engage the acknowledged talent in the country, and call out latent ability, at an expenditure hitherto unprecedented on this side of the Atlantic. They must meet with countenance themselves, however, before they can venture to bestow patronage, though perfectly content that all the profits of the work shall go to improve its character. In the meantime, without mentioning the names of the able contributors who have courteously pledged their aid, they feel warranted in stating that arrangements have been made, which will enable them to commence their undertaking, under literary auspices the most favorable

PEABODY & CO.
219 Broadway, New York

Amusements, &c.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.

Locomotive Engine, Cars, and Rail-Road.

WM NIBLO respectfully informs the public that he is now exhibiting, in full operation around the South Garden, the beautiful little Engine called the Novelty, made expressly for exhibition, together with Cars, which carries four or more persons with great rapidity over a Rail-Road of 140 yards, at the rate of eight miles the hour

The Novelty was made by Mr. Baldwin, of Philadelphia, a distinguished Mechanician, who has formed it after the model of the lightest and most beautiful of the English Engines. The Novelty for grace of action, ease, and smoothness of motion, will not be disparaged by comparison with any compulsive instrument hitherto constructed.

This beautiful specimen of mechanism would have been exhibited to the New York public before this, had it not been for the Epidemic.

As the Novelty will be exhibited but for a short season, those who wish to indulge a curiosity for witnessing this beautiful specimen of American Mechanism, and Locomotive Experiment, will no doubt find themselves highly gratified, and satisfied, that the time is not far distant, when one of those flying machines, in this age of improvement, may leave New York for the West, and return to New York in the same week, at the time was, also executed, now on the Liverpool Rail Road

The hours of exhibition from 10 to 1 o'clock in the morning, from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, and from 7 to 10 in the evening

Admittance 25 cents—children half price s29

PEALE'S MUSEUM

And Gallery of the Fine Arts,

Broadway, opposite the City Hall

THIS favorite fashionable resort has, during the temporary absence of the greater portion of the inhabitants, undergone numerous alterations and improvement, and no expense has been spared to render it still more attractive—The proprietor hails with pleasure the reappearance of his friends, and trusts that his humble endeavors to render this establishment a pleasing Evening Lounge, will on its re-opening on Monday evening next, the 3d September be continued by the smiles of numerous friends and strangers. On that occasion the great Anaconda will be fed with a living rabbit

To enumerate even a few of the principal curiosities in the Museum would occupy too much time in an advertisement, and the reputation it has attained by the superiority of its specimens, at once does away the necessity of puffing The public are invited to judge for themselves

Admittance to all 25 cents—children half price. Season tickets on moderate terms. s29

THE COURT OF DEATH,

PAINTED by Rembrandt Peale, is now open for exhibition and sale at the Rooms (late Atheneum) corner of Broadway and Liberty-st

The idea of this subject was taken from Bishop Proteus' Poem on Death. The picture is 24 feet long, 13 feet high, and 23 figures size of life. This very popular Picture, which was exhibited in several cities with unprecedented success, has not been unrolled for many years. It was reserved for the sole exhibition in Gallery, but that purpose being abandoned, and the author about to proceed to Europe, it will be disposed of by private or public sale, either to deposit in some Gallery or Public Place, or for private speculation as an exhibition picture. The following is a correct list of the receipts of this picture during the short period of its exhibition: In Baltimore, $9785; Philadelphia, $3811 (chiefly of yellow fever); New-York, 1767; Boston 1067; Salem 152; Charleston 1099; Savannah 300; Augusta 512; Richmond 277; Washington and Alexandria 670—in all $8220. This picture has lost none of its attraction, having been often enquired for; and a new generation has since grown up whose curiosity may be gratified in the contemplation of it.

THATCHED COTTAGE GARDEN,

JERSEY CITY

SAMUEL S. LYNCH, late of Castle Garden, respectfully informs the citizens of New-York and vicinity, that he has taken the above establishment of this well called place of resort for rural pleasure and health, and that he is now ready to receive company, and affords every comfort and convenience that can be found in any similar establishment in the City of New-York

Two superior boats, and the requisite apparatus for the pleasant and agreeable sport of fishing, are at all times in readiness for the accommodation of friends and patrons June—tf

THE SERAPHINE,

A NEW MUSICAL INSTRUMENT, INVENTED BY C. G. CHRISTMAN, 398 PEARL-ST.

AFTER a long time of uninterrupted perseverance, this extraordinary instrument is introduced to public notice in its present very gratifying perfection. The Seraphine will be understood to be a keyed instrument, or an Organ in miniature, peculiarly adapted for domestic purposes; it is sufficiently powerful for small churches. It is impossible to conceive so small an instrument capable of producing such an immense quantity of sound, at the same time it is capable of the utmost possible delicacy of diminuendo and crescendo, from the soft sighing of the Æolian harp to the grandeur and majesty of the full organ in a degree never before attained, combined by any other instrument Such an instrument, independently of its novelty, cannot fail to be valuable to any performer on the pianoforte or organ

The Flute, Bassoon, Clarionet, &c. more may be procured, right key'd Flutes, Accordians, Pocket and Kent bugles, for which the has been honored with the first premium of the American Institute, also Guitars, Violins, Military and other Instruments, Music, which he has just published for the Guitar; the beautiful song Green Hills of Tyral, as sung by Mrs Austin in the Opera of Cinderella, with three new Waltzes composed by O. Torpe, and to be continued in numbers.

WATERING PLACE.

No. 44 Bowery, 1st door south of the Theatre.

J. CAIN & CO. Proprietors of this establishment, respectfully inform their friends and the public, that they have fitted up the various apartments of their Hotel in a style of comfort and accomodation unsurpassed by any other similar establishment in the city, and that, in addition to the well known genuineness of their liquor establishment, both for strangers and residents they have finished their Ten-pin Alley on a plan of superior commodiousness and beauty, where gentlemen of the most scrupulous morality may freely enjoy the healthiest and most invigorating exercise, apart from certain pernicious practices which are too common in houses of public entertainment

The subscribers having established the rules of their Hotel on a footing of unexceptionable propriety and order, respectfully invite that liberal patronage which they will make it their constant endeavor to merit. J. CAIN & CO.

L. I. COHEN,

REFINED Black Lead Pencil and Everpoint Pencil manufacturer, and importer of Fancy Articles 71 William-street New York.

R. N. WHITE.

ENGRAVER ON WOOD
No 7 THEATRE ALLEY,
NEW YORK

REMOVAL.

JOHN PURDELL, Dentist, has removed his office from 290 1-2 Broadway, to 303 corner of Duane and Broadway. ☞ Entrance in Duane street

LANSING & MORSE,

ENGRAVERS ON WOOD,
175 BROADWAY,
s1 NEW YORK

DR. I. FRANCIS,

SURGEON DENTIST, 93 Chatham street, between Duane and Pearl streets New York

Miscellaneous.

ACCOUNT BOOKS,

Stationary, &c.

WILLIAM C. TAYLOR, Jr. No. 45 Wall-Street, a few doors south of the Merchant's Exchange, has constantly on hand, at the most liberal prices, Account Books of every description and of superior quality.

Likewise a select and general assortment of Stationary, at the Lowest market prices.

Blank Books ruled to any pattern, and bound in the best style, by long experienced and first-rate workmen.

Blanks, of all kinds, Visiting Cards, Sealing Wax, Lead Pencils, Ink Stands, Wafers, Quills, Ink, Slates, Pounce, all kinds of metallic Pens, Pocket Books, &c &c. always on hand.

☞ Bills of